21st Century Shoe Shine

By Dana Bradley

Back in the early to mid 1900's it wasn't uncommon to see a man shoe shine a business man's shoes. In most cases, a shoe shiner made more money on his own than working in the fields or in a sweatshop. Nearly 100 years later in a park in a park in a popular city, a man walks around with an old paint buck that he uses for his seat; underneath his arm is his tool kit to repair any man's shoe and add a little sparkle in their step.

This man receives a lot of stares and sometimes dirty looks from people who wonder, 'How can he stoop so low to shine someone's shoe'. This is how he makes his living. Young men dressed in Brooks Brothers Suits with cufflinks or shades of black and grey slacks with cashmere sweaters (business casual). As they walk into the park to enjoy the little quiet that's left in this big city, they whip out their palm pilot to view their stock status before a man interrupts their piece to ask to do a shoe shine.

Then young man accepts even though he just purchased his Kenneth Cole shoes yesterday. 15 minutes pass and this young man whips out his palm pilot once again to email his secretary to cancel his last appointment, he's getting his shoes shined.

It's 12:30 in the afternoon and believe it or not, this shoe shiner has already earned $100 for the day and he has only been shining shoes for 2 hours. That young man made $30 in the past two hours...go figure. Actually, the shoe shiner made more in 2 hours than some of the people who gave him dirty looks as they passed by.

This man may be a shoe shiner but he is in control of his own destiny...his 'career destiny'. He sets his own hours where as the man that's getting his shoe shined and has to answer to someone. Not the shoe shiner. Let's say that the shoe shiner consistently shines 3 to 4 people per hour for the amount of $20. Let's say he works 8 hours straight, the same amount of time the young man works in his posh office building. 8 hours at 3 people per hour is a total of $480 dollars. The shoe shiner is only $120 away from earning the young man's weekly salary gross amount.

Five Ways to Break In Party Shoes

By Kathryn Finney

1. Wear them around the house for at least 2 days, with a pair of thick white cotton athletic socks, using either sandpaper or a sidewalk to slightly scuff the bottom.
2. If they're leather, waterproof the outside of the shoes, then soak the entire pair underwater for about 2 minutes. Wearing a pair of thick white socks, walk around your house until dry. The shoe will mold to your foot. Caution: Don't try this with an expensive pair, or light-colored shoes.
3. Purchase a pair of Dr. Scholl's Heel liners, available at you local drugstore, and place them on the inside heel of the shoe. The liners help not only to break in the shoe, but also to keep your heels from slipping and rubbing.
4. If the shoe is particularly tight or stiff, grab it by the heel and gently knead it back and forth to loosen the sole, being very careful not to break the sole.
5. If all else fails, purchase a shoe stretcher, a device similar to a shoe tree that helps stretch tight shoes. This device can be purchased from your local shoe repair shop or shoe store.
