3 Reasons To Book The Irish Riviera Now!

By The Irish Riviera

The "Irish Riviera" is the name given to the sunny south coast of Ireland, where small towns nestle next door to each other along a beautiful coastline with sandy beaches, welcoming people and fantastic food. Within easy reach of visitors arriving by air or sea, it's the perfect holiday destination for those who want to experience a true taste of Ireland.

If you've never been to the Irish Riviera, but the idea of sea, scenery and seafood appeals to you, then here are 3 great reasons why you should book now:

1. The towns

The Irish Riviera is a collection of towns of various sizes, serving a range of local and tourist communities. From Waterford in the north, where the famous crystal is designed and produced, to the popular town of Kinsale in the south, which host a large arts community and some of the best restaurants in Ireland, you can find a coastal or inland town that makes you feel welcome. Set in an area of considerable historical and cultural interest, the towns of the Irish Riviera alone make it a great holiday destination.

2. The attractions

The main attraction of the Irish Riviera is clear: its coastline. With beautiful beaches, sheltered coves and working fishing ports, this part of the Irish coast has something to offer anyone who loves the sea. Youghal, the town at the centre of the Irish Riviera region, has two blue-flag beaches, and other areas offer sheltered bathing, rock-pool fun and excellent wildlife watching. It's not just the beaches that bring people to this part of Ireland, though. Music, literature and crafts are an important attraction, with festivals and on-going entertainments keeping visitors occupied all year round. There's plenty of sport available too, including golf, water sports and the famous Irish horse racing calendar.

3. The accommodation

Whatever type of holiday accommodation you prefer, you can find it on the Irish Riviera. From hotels for those who like to be pampered, to friendly bed and breakfast rooms for those on the move, accommodation is of a high standard and a reasonable cost. Try a self catering cottage just yards from the beach for a perfectly independent, yet truly memorable holiday experience.

Mexico's Riviera Maya: The New Caribbean Vacation Hotspot

By Barry deCocq

Travelers who are looking for a fantastic all-inclusive resort destination that is priced far below most tropical destinations in and around the Caribbean should look into Mexico's Riviera Maya. This area has fast become a very popular tropical vacation getaway for travelers from around the world. The Riviera Maya is located on the Caribbean side of Mexico and encompasses the stretch of coastline ranging from about 5 miles to 60 miles south of Cancun.

Don't be misled into thinking that because you fly into Cancun to get to the Riviera Maya that it is anything like Cancun and its spring break, party-like atmosphere...it is far from it. The Riviera Maya has been set aside by the Mexican government as a semi-protected area, and as such it cannot become the touristy, high-rise resort type of destination you find in the Cancun hotel zone. Resorts can only be built 3-stories or less in height and they have to be constructed to embrace the surrounding vegetation, wildlife, and topography. It is a much more family-friendly and romantic vacation destination.

Resorts in the Riviera Maya are primarily all-inclusive properties. Because of the remote locations of many of the properties there are very few offsite dining areas. All-inclusive resorts give the traveler the benefit of having everything paid for prior to their arrival. All meals, drinks (alcoholic and non-alcoholic), non-motorized watersports, and other amenities are included in package prices. The more upscale all-inclusive resorts of 4-star and higher quality typically have many different restaurant options ranging from buffet to world-class a la carte cuisine....all-included! Some of the more popular resort chains in the Riviera Maya include Iberostar Resorts, Palace Resorts, and Secrets Resorts & Spas. Resorts run anywhere from more family-related types of properties or resorts for the budget-minded to very upscale adults-only spa resorts.

One of the best reasons to choose the Mexico Riviera Maya for your next vacation is not just for the superb quality resorts and great value, but also for the fantastic tours and excursions that are available in around the Yucatan Peninsula region. This area is teeming with Mayan ruins and ancient architecture that are very popular with tourists. The most majestic of the local Mayan ruins are the pyramids of Chichen Itza. These incredibly preserved pyramids date back to 400AD and this awe-inspiring tour will leave with you many wonderful memories. There are many other Mayan ruins tours you can take as well. In addition to ruins you can also experience many eco-based tours that take you to game and marine preserves where you will find amazing wildlife and snorkeling that is nothing short of amazing. Another popular day-trip for those staying in the Riviera Maya region is the island of Cozumel. You can reach this quaint island by ferry from the town of Playa del Carmen located in the heart of the Riviera Maya. It is a short 45 minute ferry ride and once there you will find duty-free shopping, great dining, and some of the world's best SCUBA diving and snorkeling.

If you have taken tropical vacations in the Caribbean or Hawaii and are looking for a new destination to go to the Riviera Maya is an excellent choice that will definitely impress and have you ready to come back to again and again.
