Affordable Child Care options for the Stay at Home Business Parent

By James Biscardi

Perhaps the biggest obstacle for the stay at home business mom or dad is the kids. That screaming toddler is not going to be quiet when you have business calls or take that nap to let you get your work done. This will be the same child who will eat all of your post-its and stick food into your hard drive. As you are ripping your hair out and getting more and more frustrated you will wonder what the point of working at home was if you were going to still need childcare. You were probably envisioning no more commutes, flexible hours, and lunch with the kids $\frac{1}{2}$ everyday.

Your childcare options are flexible as well that is the beauty of being self-employed. Here are some of the most common affordable ways to take care of kids while you build your family's fortune from home:

(1) Childcare Co-op: Find a group of work at home parents and swap off childcare duties. You can keep track of how many hours you watch each child and use the time you accrue when you need it most. The great thing about this is it is free. The downside is that you will have to give up work time to handle other people's children.

(2) Trading or Mom-swapping: This is the smaller version of co-op. this will involve you and a good friend trading off childcare days. Make sure you set clear boundaries about when you will take the other child and when they will take yours. You don't want to be taken advantage of. You will also want to make sure the kids like each other and get along well. If they don't then this will end up being a bad experience.

(3) Sitter Sharing: Share a sitter with a friend. You can have the sitter watch both kids at the same time and split the cost or use the sitter on alternate days. Make sure that you have a written agreement on how the sitter is used and what you will be paying to avoid any unseen complications.

(4) Barter: Trade your products and services with a neighbor or friend in exchange for childcare. This will keep you from spending money and still pay the person doing the care for you.

(5) Day Care: You will find that the right day care center will be a rewarding experience for both child and parent. Which day care is best is entirely up to you and beyond the scope of this article. Costs vary from center to center and from state to state. But, you will find that the return on investment will be worth it because of your greater focus and productivity.

To come up with inexpensive childcare solutions you must be a networking pro. Spread the word that you are looking for childcare to everyone you know. Think in terms of trading and business opportunities. You are looking for a partner in business deal. This will help you to get what you need. Some moms are lucky to have businesses that are kid friendly. They are the lucky ones for sure. Those ladies who have to make endless phone calls or have meetings may find that childcare of some sort is unavoidable. Try your best to get the right childcare for you and not spend an arm and a leg getting it.

What You Need To Know About Child Custody: Find Out With A Florida Lawyer

By Low Jeremy

Before, two has become one...

Now one has become two again. It is a new chapter in your life where you have to deal with single hood the second time around. Huge changes can happen in your life. Your daily routine may be changed, even your lifestyle. But this time, it is not all about you.

You have a child to consider. New concerns start to come up. If your spouse is not willing to have a personal agreement with regards to your child, how will you go about it?

For instance you live in the state of "Flowery Easter", and then child custody lawyers in Florida may help orient you with matters regarding child custody.

Child custody is a lawful term which depicts the legal and realistic relationship between a child and his parent. It is granted by the court to the justifiable parent who can very well take care of the child.

Your Florida child custody lawyer may guide you to be familiar with the different types of child custody so you will have an idea which type to go into.

Physical Child Custody

Your lawyer will help you understand that physical child custody points out to a parent who has the tangible accountability to take care of the child. Normally under this type of custody, the granted parent sees to it that he will be able to provide the child with his basic needs and other relevant necessities apt for the child's growth.

Commonly, under this custody the child lives with the parent who has been granted custody.

Joint Child Custody

With this type of custody, both parents have tangible accountabilities with the child. Both your child custody lawyers can help you with the necessary parental supervision arrangements.

The agreement with this type of custody is that the child will have to spend a definite period of time with you as well as your spouse. Commonly, your lawyer will suggest a rotating schedule. For instance, the first and third weeks of the month will be spent with you and the rest of the weeks will be spent with your spouse.

Legal Child Custody

Most lawyers despise this type of custody since it is the most intricate. Your lawyer will have a keen examination on all aspects such as your child's education, physical address, health care matters, religious concerns and other applicable matters to promote a healthy well-being for your child.

When you sought for legal child custody, the court will determine which specific aspects of child-rearing will be given to you and your spouse. You may be given responsibility to handle your child's education. On the other hand, your spouse may be granted the duty to give your child a good-quality health care.

Sole Child Custody

Your lawyer should carefully discuss this matter with you. This type of custody is given to a parent who has the capability to raise the child in a healthy environment where he will be given utmost care, attention and love. You as the parent who have been granted guardianship have an exclusive right to take care of your child.

However your lawyer must remind you that with this type of custody, there is a possibility that the court will give the custody to the other party if they find you incapable.

You may want to contact recommended Florida child custody lawyers for further information regarding the types of child custody.

It does not matter whether you are alone or with someone, what is important is how you give worth to your child - the fruit of once a great love.
