When it comes to designer perfumes, there is no doubt that they can be quite costly. Anything of high quality normally comes with a hefty price tag. It's the same case with perfumes as well. Because of this, perfumes make great gifts for special occasions like birthdays, Christmas or anniversaries. Another thing about perfumes is that they are hardly ever on discount. Yes, this is true but only if you don't seek hard enough. Today it is possible to buy expensive designer perfumes at a discounted price. In fact, there are other options as well to get these perfumes at a discounted rate.

The best place to look for discount perfumes is undoubtedly the internet. There are virtually hundreds of stores online, which offer great deals on the internet for a whole of designer perfumes. The reason why they are much cheaper online is that they do not have a large overhead to spend. They do not operate from a store where they need to pay for rental or stock up on their merchandise. They provide online and just have to order your goods only when the order comes in. You have to be extremely sure of what you want though because you will not have the benefit of testing the perfume and keep in mind that you need to pay for shipping.

If you do not mind paying for shipping, then shopping for perfumes on discount stores online be good. Another option to buy discounted perfumes is to buy the perfumes that are no longer in production. If you are one those who are not into buying what is the latest and don't mind wearing a perfume that has not been around for some time then purchasing discontinued perfumes at discounted prices are definitely a great cost saver. Most of the perfumes have a short life span therefore when the demand is not there the price normally dips. You can have a designer perfume without putting much strain on your wallet.

Imitations are also hugely available in the market. Most imitations have really good scent and may have the fragrance just like the real thing but not quite. The price is highly affordable and you can still have a good perfume just minus the designer label. Who knows you might like it more than the real thing.

If you do not mind wearing an inexpensive perfume then you should keep your options open especially when you do not have much to spare. Wearing a perfume is all about finding the scent that you like best. So what if the perfume does not have a famous label on it. As long as it smells good and lasts reasonably long, there is nothing cheap about wearing inexpensive perfumes. The idea is to smell good so it really does not matter how or what.

However, if you still insist on having a designer perfume and you are not so fond of online shopping, then the only other option left is to wait for the right time to buy. Holiday seasons are the best time with plenty of discounts available in most of the stores. Sometimes in a certain time of the year when the stores are doing some clearance to usher in the new stock, there will be plenty of discounts so that they can finish their current stock.

Perfumes are meant to make you smell good and feel good. So what if you are wearing a discounted perfume, the chances are not many will even realize and it is definitely far better than wearing none.

Chanel 5 And Other Perfumes Naming

By Paton Jackson

Have you ever thought about the names of the perfumes? Why each of them has its specific own name? Is it a spontaneous decision to name a perfume "JOY", "Shalimar" or "CHANEL N' 5" ? Why N' 5 and not N' 6 , N' 7 or N' 8?

"Perfume", says Sophia Grosjman, IFF's star perfumer, "is a promise in a bottle". We want to believe. We crave to be prettier, richer, sexier and happier than we are. Perfume speaks more to our vulnerabilities than to our strengths. Consider the labels on the fragrances we buy: Pleasures, Beautiful, Delicious, Sexy. As Charles Revson said: "We sell hope". And we buy. But, behind almost every significant perfume there is a story. Take for example "Shalimar".

According to a legend, Raymond Guerlain and his wife were on their trip to USA by sea. His wife wore "Shalimar" and all of the passengers were astonished by this innovative, oriental vanilla scented perfume. When the couple landed USA, all the high society fell in love with "Shalimar" which became favorite still today. The perfume got its name from a legend about an Indian emperor who had a garden named "Shalimar".

"My dresses fit very well my clients...I want a perfume addressed to a modern woman that will fit her as my clothes do. It must have a character. And it must be an expensive one". Ernest Beaux, the creator of "CHANEL N' 5" introduced Coco Chanel (Gabrielle) ten bottles, and separated them in two groups. One group was numbered in numbers from 1 to 5, the second group was numbered 20 to 24. Mademoiselle Chanel chose bottle N' 5. When Beaux asked her why she had chosen that specific bottle, she answered: " I am going to exhibit my collection on May the 5th, c'est-a-dire, the 5th day of the 5th month. So let's take a bottle with this number. Hope this number will bring success to perfume".
