Are You Ready To Stop Working? by John Colanzi

I've got a confession to make.

I don't work anymore.

I haven't worked in almost two years.

Why?

I have so much fun online. I would never consider it work.

The amazing thing is the more fun I have the better my results. Once I quit working everything just fell into place.

If you're not having fun and if you consider your online enterprise just another 9 to 5, maybe you should reconsider your goals.

Don't take my word for it, listen to what some of the worlds greatest thinkers have to say about Work.

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in his glory was not arrayed like one of these.
Jesus

Work is love made visible.
Kahil Gibran

Are You Ready To Stop Working?

What we call "creative work" ought not to be called work at all, because it isn't. I imagine that Thomas Edison never did a days work in his last fifty years.

Stephen Leacock

If you feel that work is a punishment or hardship, or if you have no desire for work, or live in the hopes of retiring soon – do not think you are entertaining the thoughts of a wise man; you are merely dancing to the tunes that savages played ten thousand years ago.

Patanjali

Greater even than the pious man is he who eats that which is the fruit of his own toil; for scripture declares him twice blessed.

Talmud

The crowning fortune of a man is to be born to some pursuit which finds him employment and happiness, whether it be to make baskets, or broadswords, or canals or statues or songs.

Emerson

Do they know something you and I don't?

If you're one of the 95% who never make any money online, what do you have to lose. Try doing what you love.

Don't pick something to promote only because you think it will make money. Pick something that inspires you to do your best.

Pick something you believe in and gets your blood flowing.

Find your "Magnificent Obsession." You may never have to work again.

Wishing You Success

Are You Ready To Stop Working?

By Rondell Demmings

As I connect with more and more women I am seeing that many have a desperate need for a man. I had one woman tell me that her ex-boyfriend put a gun to her head and told her to get out of his life. Stop following him, stop calling him and leave him alone. This woman felt that he was just having a "bad day" and wanted to know when would be a good time to call him and tell him that she loves him. I was absolutely amazed. This is definitely a woman who doesn't love herself. Why would she constantly pursue a person who clearly doesn't want her?

I recently read that it takes 11 years to totally get over the hurt of a past relationship. Although you have moved on the pain still lingers on. So imagine if you leave one relationship for another relationship for another relationship, that is at least over thirty years of healing. Who wants to go through that many years of hurt and trying to heal?

I have learned from personal experience that when you go from one relationship to another, you are not allowing yourself time to heal. You go into the new relationship with the scars and battle wounds from the past relationship. Although you are thirsty for love you still cause drama because you are not able to let go of that past relationship. You are standing in a karate position waiting to block any situation that comes your way because you fear being hurt again.

Usually when you go from one relationship to another you are desperate and will allow the first man or woman to enter your life, knowing that this isn't the person you would have given the time of day to in the past. So this relationship has started on a bad foot from the beginning because you are settling to fill a void in your life.

In order to heal, like in any situation you have to give it time. You must take the time to enjoy your own company again and learn to love yourself again. This is the time to start working on getting your finances in order so that when the right person comes you don't have to be financially needy. Start working on your home so that you will feel good about where you live. Start working on your spirituality so that you will realize that you are never alone. Get a makeover so that you can feel good about yourself again. When we lose someone special we tend to believe it had something to do with us and then we develop a low self-esteem. Start working on your dream, whether it is going back to school, taking a vacation or jumping from an airplane. This is the time to make your hopes, dreams and wishes come true.

When you have created a life you are proud of then you are less emotionally needy. You can go to the next relationship feeling more secure with yourself because you have made accomplishments in your life without the help of a significant other. Once you are happy with self and feel that you truly have it "going on" then you are ready to allow love in your life again. In the past when I have felt the most content in my life is when romance has come to me.

Today I challenge you if you are between relationships to start working on you and start working on your dreams. I guarantee that once you are at peace with yourself then you will be ready for the relationship made in heaven.
