Atlanta Falcons

By Eoin Kane

If you're like me, and you're a big fan of a sports team, you'll know exactly what it's like. When I'm watching the Atlanta Falcons play, its much more than just a game. When I sit down in the stadium or in front of the TV, I know I'm part of the team, I'm part of something bigger. You'll know yourself. You can feel it in your bones: every yard lost or gained, every result or near miss, you can feel in your blood because your team means so much. And if you're like me and you're a die-hard supporter, you'll know you just can't stop thinking about it.

I bought Falcons wallpaper for my house, I own several different jerseys, and I even have Falcons wallpaper on my computer desktop. You either feel it, or you don't, but if you do, you'll know you have to show your loyal and faithful support at all times.

It was my wife who caused the problems with my wallpaper. She outright objected when I bought it a couple of years ago, as she was the one responsible for the decor in the house. OK, so she had good taste, and she wasn't the type to go for flowers and old-lady patterns. She was more into pastille colors with abstract prints and paintings to complement. But with the Falcons paper, I wanted to show my passion and love for the team. I only wanted to put it in the one room, where I watched most of the games. At least that way I could show my support for my favorite football team, even if it's only for the benefit of myself and my friends.

Eventually, after realizing I was determined and that I wasn't going to submit she let me keep it so long as I promised not to paper any other rooms with it again. I stuck to my word, but I did not stop at decorating with wallpaper. I bought loads of related ornaments like little Falcons helmets and other souvenirs to make a shrine to my favorite team. I can tell the wife hates it but she just doesn't understand. I love my shrine, even though it is only ever for me and my buddies, but I just love showing my passion for the Falcons in any way I can. I simply have to some how show my support for the team.

NFC Road to the SuperBowl

NFC Road to the SuperBowl by Gary Whittaker

NFC Conference Championship

St–Louis Rams Vs Atlanta Falcons

Can Atlanta can disrupt the Ram passing game by exploiting their weak Offensive line, with pro–bowl led Patrick Kerney and his 13 sacks this season?

Can Atlanta establish ball control by using the running game?

Can Michael Vick step up and take Atlanta to a playoff victory?

We think so. It will be a close game, but Atlanta should win by a field goal

Minnesota Vikings vs Philadelphia Eagles

The Eagles acquired Owens to take them to that next step. Owens is hurt and out for the game.

While Owens is out, Moss is in, despite being hobbled by leg problems.

The Eagles love to Blitz, but Culpepper loves Blitzing defences, as he has posted a 63.5% completion rating, thrown for over 1200 yards, scored 15 touchdowns with only 1 pick when Blitzed.

The only way for the Eagles to pull this one out is for Jevon Kearse to contain Culpepper, and for the Eagles Defensive co–ordinator to contain Moss.

Won't happen

NFC Championship

Minnesota Vikings vs Atlanta Falcons

Falcons will need Vick to produce as advertised in order to beat this Viking team. But this time, it will have to be with his arm, and not his feet. He will need to get his wide receivers into the game, not just Alge Crumpler.

The Vikings, both Culpepper and Moss specifically, have been highly criticized of late for their lack of leadership. Controversy can be a great motivator in the absence of leadership. Look for the Vikings to use the various issues of this past year, along with the criticism they will receive for betting a flightless Eagle team for a huge win over the Falcons.
