Avoiding The Lost Luggage Game

By Lanny Hintz

And traveler's trip would be improved if they can guarantee that their luggage will be waiting for them at their destination. Although this seems like a tall order, there are steps any passenger can take to insure that their luggage will not be lost. Having your luggage when you reach your destination increases the pleasure to be found in the trip and also reduces stress. Any steps that can be taken to this end are well worth any time and effort they might take prior to your trip.

Some tips include the following. Try not to travel with anything expensive. If you must travel with valuable items such as electronics, jewelry or even prescription drugs, they should be kept on your person or in your carry on bag. This way, if the airline does lose your luggage they won't lose the most important or valuable items that you have, thus reducing the chances of them being stolen or lost forever. You should wear something that is appropriate for where you are going. If you are traveling to a business meeting wear a suit. If you are going to someplace casual, dress casually. If you are dressed appropriately for where you are going and your luggage is lost, you needn't be dressed inappropriately and will never feel uncomfortable.

You should keep track of what you have packed in each of your bags and know what the bags themselves look like. That way, if the bag is lost you will be able to give a description not only of the bag, but of its contents. This is especially helpful if the bag has been disfigured in some way or if a zipper has broken. Furthermore, your carry-on bag should double as your emergency bag. You should place as many items as possible that you might need during the 24 - 48 period it might take for you bag to be found. You needn't rely solely on the airline's luggage tags to keep your bags identified and safe. You can include your own tags so that the bag can be identified. It is important to take all of these precautions in order to avoid losing your bag and the subsequent inconvenience of doing so. Though these steps might take a couple of extra minutes they will save you hours of stress and worry should your bag get lost and are therefore well worthwhile.

Tips On How To Avoid Lost or Delayed Luggage

By Jerry Smith

Luggage loss can be due to theft, misrouting or the unscheduled changing of planes. There are things that you can do to prevent your luggage from being lost or being delayed in arrival. Below are some suggestions of some of the measures you can take to protect your belongings.

Using colorful straps on the outside of your luggage will prevent it from popping open. They will also help to quickly identify your luggage in the claim area. Thieves will refrain from taking unique or colorful luggage because people would more readily notice them leaving with it.

In order to possibly prevent the misrouting of your luggage be sure any old flight information tags or information is removed from your luggage. Many times, if they are not removed it can cause your luggage to go to the previous destination. Along the same idea, keep your contact information current.

Putting your contact information on the inside as well as the outside is another preventative measure. On the off chance that your bags pop open your contact information is readily available. It is a good idea also to place your itinerary inside your luggage as well. If opened and delayed, this could help speed the process of getting your luggage to you.

Other methods of preventing the delay or loss of your luggage is the immediate claiming of your luggage after arriving at your destination. If lost you need to be able to describe your luggage exactly, it could help if you have a picture of the bag and of its contents. If traveling with another person consider swapping one outfit so that if your luggage is misplaced you both have something to fall back on. Loss or delays can't always be prevented but you can lessen the chances of it happening to you.
