Boston To Host Sustainable Energy Trade Show

By Rick Hendershot

Linknet News Daily Digest – December 22, 2005 – The Northeast Sustainable Energy Association

(NESEA) will hold its 31st annual Building Energy Conference and Trade Show at Boston's Seaport World Trade Center on March 7–9, 2006.

The conference will feature more than 150 speakers dealing with topics ranging from photovoltaics, utility scale renewable energy, biofuels, urban design, building design, industrial design, green buildings and green products.

The show is expected to draw 2,000 participants for activities including: workshops, sessions, lectures, networking, a free public forum, and a trade show for renewable energy and green building professionals.

The event is recommended for architects, developers, investors, policy makers, engineers, builders, city and town planners, building systems designers, real estate professionals, and other professionals interested in renewable energy and green building practices.

==>MacWorld to feature usual slate of innovations

MacWorld, to be held in San Francisco, Jan 9–13 2006 will feature a strong focus on music and audio. This is not surprising, considering Apple's success in this area over the last few years.

Music-related exhibitors will include Harman Multimedia which introduced an award-winning line of companion products for the iPod, as well as Musitek showing off the latest release of SmartScore music-scanning and music-scoring application. Other features include Guitar Center, showing off the latest recording software and hardware, music creation and editing tools.

Other displays will feature a Podcasting Stage where attendees can see listings to leading podcasters, and the MacWorld Auto Show featuring specially fitted cars demonstrating the latest in iPod integration.

==>Government Officials Debate Technology Options at CES

The International Consumer Electronics Show to be held in Las Vegas, January 5–8, 2006 is one of the most important shows of its kind in the world. It features cutting–edge displays of new consumer technology, with a focus on audio, video, mobile electronics, information technology, wireless communications, home networking and much more.

Because of its importance to the global economy, this year more than 100 top federal and state government officials from states across the U.S. will be in attendance to "hear, touch, understand, and debate the hottest technology products and services."

Government officials include members of the US Senate, as well as the House of Representatives. Officials from the White House, FCC, and other government agencies will also attend.

Debates and presentations will focus on the environmental impacts of technology, security issues, and contentious issues such as Music Industry vs. File Sharing Consumers.

The Boston Red Sox win the World Series championship, its sixth championship win, but first since 1918.

By Catherine Kenyeres

It's what they have been waiting for. The Boston Red Sox wrapped up their four–game sweep of the Cardinals with a 3–0 victory in Game 4. The 86 year stretch between World Series championships is finally over and the World Series Trophy has found itself a home in Boston. It's the Boston Red Sox sixth world series championship win, but the first win, since 1918. Wow!!

The pitching staff for Boston was remarkable keeping the Cardinals to three runs over 27 innings. Derek Lowe was on the money with his unparalleled pitching and the Cardinals couldn't touch him. Lowe's incomparable pitching was seemingly similar to the pitching he served up against the Yankees in Game 7 of the American League Championship Series. The Cardinals never led in any of the games. The Bosox went into Game 4 with the attitude to end it there; not wanting to give the Cardinals an edge of any kind. And ending it there they indeed did. And here's a team that is truly proud of its achievement.

It's certainly a twist of fate for the Boston Red Sox since they lagged behind the Yankees, 3-0, in the American League Championship Series and behind a run starting the ninth inning of Game 4. They battled to win the game in 12 innings, and seemingly, didn't lose again.

Our hats are off to you, Boston, just don't tear up the city and let cooler heads prevail. Just relax and pray that everyone remains safe.
