Business Bags From Briefcases To Backpacks

By Dana Bradley

While the briefcase throughout a great deal of history (in various forms) has been a functional item for those needing to carry documents and other items to and from work, home, and meetings, it also has become a fashion accessory of sorts, with styles changing to reflect the times. Here are some trends that have impacted the briefcase, and some ideas to consider when choosing yours.

In the era of the 80's, business garb was pretty strait laced and buttoned down. Men and women alike wore power suits. Wall Street was booming, and everyone wanted to look the part. Formal business dress said success. Accordingly, briefcases were hard, leather-bound, brown or black, and boring. As the years went by, and Generation X moved onto the job scene, a more casual style came into play. Garage entrepreneurs like Bill Gates proved that clothes did not make the man. Remember "Casual Fridays?" At some businesses, it seems like every day is casual Friday. Briefcases have gone along for the ride. You can still get them in leather, but today they are more likely to be soft sided, and they come in colors like orange and purple. If it strikes your fancy, pick up one in silk, with an oriental pattern from Wabags. If you'd rather have something a little more durable, try a microfiber or canvas bag.

With the lines between work and home becoming more blurry, people have more stuff to carry between the two. Cell phones, personal digital assistants (PDAs), laptop computers, where to stuff it all? Accordingly, briefcases with soft (and therefore expandable) sides are popular, as are those with backpack straps to distribute your heavy load more evenly. There are even briefcases with wheels. Messenger bags, which formerly were relegated to well, messengers, are becoming popular as people appreciate the hands free features of an over the shoulder bag. That way, you can keep things close to you, dig in your pocket for keys of cab fare, and talk on your cell phone. We love to multitask.

Finally, while soft sided bags are becoming more popular, the stuff that people carry in briefcases is becoming more fragile, like laptop computers, so people need bags that are padded, or at least compartments that are, to protect their electronics. While the first computer bags were tailored to fit and protect only a computer and its accessories, computer bags now are designed to hold your computer and other school or business items like papers or books, so that people don't have to carry two separate bags.

Luggage For Kids

By Jerry Smith

Traveling with children is never easy and sometimes it's not even fun. There is help on the way to alleviate this problem. Luggage makers have created kid-sized luggage in bright colors and unique designs.

Like adult luggage kid luggage has wheels. Some brands of kids luggage have wheels that are gender based. Your children will feel grown-up pulling their own bags. Besides watching kids pull their luggage is cute.

Included in kids luggage are backpacks with animals that `hug' your child. Backpacks and other luggage for kids are bright colors, cartoon characters, sports themes, flowers, dance, music, and space. Luggage can be personalized with their names. There are bags for boys in the shapes of cars.

Styles of luggage for kids include duffel bags, sport bags, backpacks with pockets for a radio or CD player. There are tote bags that will hold your child's toys and/or books. Other themes are flowers, animals, and camouflage design.

Kids luggage are sized for kids and designed for their needs. The kids luggage is also a way to ease your burden as they have their own carry on bag. Having kids use their own luggage can help them to care for their things and allows them to have fun as well.

Many backpacks and other luggage for both adults and kids have holders for bottles and have waterproof snack pouches. There is also an element of convenience with kids luggage. Be creative and have fun traveling with your child or children.
