California DMV : Doesn't Have To Be A Nightmare

By Christopher M. Luck

Going to the California DMV has long been known as a horrible, boring, dull, patience-testing yet necessary ordeal that has left people confused, angry, fed-up and above all feeling cheated out of their precious free-time. Thankfully the modern electronic era that we now conveniently reside in has given us some options apart from standing in the horrendous and droning lines associated with the California DMV.

>From now on when we need to update our driver's licenses and state ID's many Californians are finding that there is an easier and much more pleasant process to completing these mundane tasks than by going to the Los Angeles DMV. For example many government agencies now offer the same services as the brick and mortar establishments at their online counterparts. By accessing services online, you can save time, money, harassment, embarrassment and energy by avoiding driving all the way downtown to wait in lines for hours and hours and hours.

We have all had the experience of trying to get our California driver's license renewed or our state ID Card updated and have had to make that harrowing trip to the California DMV and wait in line for hour upon hour surrounded by what seems to be the most intimidating of Los Angeles county citizens. Why is it that Brad Pitt or Angelina Jolie never happen to be at the LA DMV on the same day that you are. That's because they have figured out that many of the services offered at the physical location are also available from the convenience, security, privacy and safety of your own home or office or home office.

We all have the need to be more efficient in our ever increasingly busy modern lifestyles. By combining tasks and completing as many of them from one physical location at a time we save time, money, energy, gas(which with rising fuel costs we all need to conserve) and peace of mind. Why hop in your car, drive to the California DMV, wait in line for hours, get back in your car drive to the grocery store to get this week's food, drive across town to pick up a present for Sally's high school graduation and then back to the California DMV because you left your wallet there when you can just sit back at home and take care of everything with just a click of your mouse.

Seriously, we are living in dangerous and uncertain times these days and even a trip to the Barstow or Fresno DMV could turn into a potentially disastrous outing. It behooves us all to avoid crowded government buildings and by completing your civil service errands from the comfort of your own home just makes good sense.

If you just can't face that notorious Los Angeles traffic or you just can't find the time to wait in line for six hours or you would rather spend that six hours spending time with your family and not at the California DMV, pay a visit to the DMV web site and see if you can take care of those mindless tasks at home or the office. You will be happy you did.

DUI Law Information

By DUI Information Association

If you've been pulled over and accused of a drunk driving offense, or more commonly referred to as a DUI or DWI, then you probably have a lot of questions. You are probably scared, confused, and a little angry if you didn't feel you deserved it.

Regardless of the circumstances surrounding your incident you need to take immediate action to protect yourself, your freedom, and most importantly your driver's license. You should consult with an attorney who specializes in DUI defense immediately. If you cannot afford to retain an attorney then consider meeting with one during a free consultation to get as much free help as possible. Here are some things you should consider:

1. Contact DMV and request a hearing within the specified amount of time (usually between 7–10 days depending on the state) to try and save your drivers license.
2. The time limit is calculated from the issue date of the temporary driver license or order of revocation which is usually the day of your arrest.
3. If you are out of state, or hold an out of state license that state's DMV will still take action against your license.
4. This temporary driver license (paper one the cop gave you) is valid for only a few days from the issue date unless you request a DMV hearing. If your DMV hearing is requested the motor vehicles will "stay" your suspension and your temporary license will be extended until the hearing is complete.

5. Don't get the DMV hearing and the court appearance confused. The outcome of one almost never affects the outcome of the other.

In the DMV hearing, the hearing officer will decide on certain issues like whether the police officer had a legal reason to stop you; whether the police officer had a legal reason to arrest you; and whether or not the blood, breath, or urine result/test is reliable enough to suspend your license. This type of hearing is considered administrative and not criminal so if you expect to be represented you will need your own lawyer.
