Protect Yourself and Your Loved Ones From Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

By edbishop

Children, the elderly, individuals with respiratory problems and pets are at risk, even at low levels.

Tips to protect yourself and your loved ones:

1) Install carbon monoxide detectors in your home

Carbon Monoxide Levels – How Much is too Much?

Be sure they are equipped with a professional carbon monoxide analyzer.

If they tell you they don't have one, find another company!

3 Do not use unvented appliances (kerosene heaters, barbecue grilles) in the house.

4) If you have a garage that is attached to your home click here.

By following the above guidelines, the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning can be significantly reduced.
