

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

Choosing The Perfect Fishing Destination

By Dan Farrell

Whether you plan to saltwater or freshwater fish, you need to think about what your priorities and what you consider the 'perfect fishing trip'. Salmon fishing in Alaska or Bonefishing in the Florida Keys are obviously totally different in destination, type of tackle, weather gear...etc.

One of the first things you must do to plan a great fishing trip is to identify your priorities. You need to be more specific than just saying you want great fishing.

Great fishing may mean different things to each person in your fishing party.

One person might be happy with catching 20 fish per day, while another might be expecting 30 fish per hour. So, you need to decide this up front.

Let's take a look at some of the most important things to consider when deciding where to go on your fishing trip.

What type of fish do you want to catch?

While this may seem obvious, it is something that needs to be discussed. One person may want to fish for walleye and northern pike, while others may want to go bass fishing. Since many northern lakes have water too cold for bass, you may end up at a lake that would really disappoint the bass fisherman.

Choosing The Perfect Fishing Destination

Do you want tons of action? Or trophy fish?

Some anglers simply enjoy catching lots of fish (most any size) with the hope of getting a few big ones. Other fishermen would rather give up catching a large quantity of fish for a better chance at catching the biggest fish they can find. You need to decide which is more important to your fishing group... lots of fish that maybe aren't the biggest or fewer fish but a greater chance of a really big one.

It should be noted that there are many places where you can do both... catch lots of fish and get some big ones. But, these tend to be at the more remote and pricey lodges and are not always feasible for many fishing groups.

How are you going to catch your fish?

Do you like to troll? Or drift? Fish in streams? Deep water fish?

We've seen people trolling in 60 feet of water thinking the fish were only a few feet from the surface. Not much chance of catching anything this way. Be sure you know the type of fishing your group prefers and that the lake will offer it.

What do you want to spend for this fishing trip?

The price you're willing to pay will have a great impact on the type of fishing trip you'll have.

Be realistic. How much do you really want to spend? Are you comfortable in a tent or tar-paper shack on a lake with great fishing?

Or would you prefer staying at a more upscale fishing lodge?

Do you want to cook for yourself... or do you want the fishing camp to do the cooking?

Choosing The Perfect Fishing Destination

And what about shower facilities? Are you willing to use a community shower or do you want a private shower and bath in your own cabin. Gentlemen, if you're taking your spouse on this trip, make absolutely sure you consider this one! If you don't, it could spoil an otherwise great trip.

Other considerations are how long the trip will be and the type of fish you are looking to catch. A trip to a fishing lodge on a lake with pan fish and bass will likely be much cheaper than a trip to Alaska or Northern Canada for arctic char.

So, if you really want a great fishing trip, start by planning just exactly what you want out of the trip and how much you are willing to spend. Do it right and you can have the fishing trip of a lifetime.

Don't just make an off-the-cuff decision, put some time and thought into what your 'perfect' fishing trip would be and start planning.

Dan Farrell is the owner of Salt & Freshwater Fishing Tips And Articles found at:

<http://www.thebest-fishing.com>

How To Have An Exiting Getaway Without Leaving Town

By John Morris

There are more remedies for the business of life than an expensive two week vacation. Your hometown is full of amazing sights and sounds that you, with a bit of creativity and know-how, can turn into the perfect getaway.

1. Jungle Expedition

There are many parts of your hometown that are designated as parks. Many of these areas offer trails in good condition for walking or hiking. The animals you see during the day will be different from those at night. If you go at night, be sure to watch a scary movie beforehand but remember to bring along a flashlight.

Choosing The Perfect Fishing Destination

2. Fishing Trip

First, a word of warning. Be sure to contact your local wildlife and game department for fishing reports pertaining to your area first. In some cases it is illegal to fish above a certain number of fish, but you can get around this using the catch and release method if you are not going to eat the fish but only catch them for sport. If you are fortunate enough to live close to the ocean, you will be able to enjoy a leisurely fishing trip to the local pier, followed by a relaxing dinner.

3. Camping

The entire family can enjoy a weekend at a local campground. This may even be the perfect time to take out the RV for one last time before summer is over. Best of all, you can do this without any of the stress of a long distance trip. Your destination is right there.

4. Dining Out

There are probably lots of restaurants that you have thought of going to, but never did. Now is your chance! Also, don't worry about the costs – if you budget wisely, price is never an issue. You should budget for a local getaway in the same way that you do for a full blown travel getaway.

For more great getaway related articles and resources check out

<http://weknowhotels.info>

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!