Choosing The Right Uniform For Your Employees

By Gabriel Adams

If you are an employer or business owner and you need to choose a uniform for your employees, there are several factors you should consider before doing so. Since changing uniforms would be an expensive, time consuming hassle, you want to make sure to pick the best uniform when you start.

Of course, you also have the option of not choosing a uniform, but instituting dress code. For example, you might require employees in your IT department to wear blue jeans, a solid color T shirt, and their corporate ID tags. Or you could have a partial uniform – just the shirt, for example.

But the focus of this article is primarily helping you choose a uniform for your employees. Here are several factors that you should consider.

1 - Function What do you need the uniform to accomplish? Is it for looks only, or does it need to have special functionality?

2 - Wearability What kind of wear will your employees be putting on their uniforms? Be sure that the uniform you choose will hold up well under the conditions your employees will be working. For example, most military work/battledress uniforms are made of ripstop material so they will hold up to the abuse they receive on the job.

3 - Image What image do you want your uniforms to convey? Think carefully about the message you want you uniforms to convey - professional? Tough? Ready for work? Sophisticated? Military? Ensure that the uniform you choose conveys the message you want.

4 - Washability If at all possible, choose a uniform that is easily washed and cared for. Few things are more of a nuisance than clothes that are a pain to wash and dry. If possible, select a material that will not need to be ironed.

Keeping these factors in mind, you can choose a uniform that will make you, your employees, and your customers happy. Good luck!

A Great Buyers Guide For Uniforms

By Trevor Marshall

Your organisation deserves a professionally designed uniform. Be sure to provide a wide variety of clothing options such as t-shirts, polos, aprons and even hoodies. Arriving at the perfect uniform isn't an exact science, but with these helpful tips you will be at a big advantage.

1. Make Your Uniform Functional

The key to making a great uniform is to incorporate elements that are very functional. Nurses often deal with many patients each day and so having a plain and easily washable uniform is an important thing.

2. Avoid Bland Colour Schemes

The wrong colour scheme can make even the most functional uniform fail. For example, nursing uniforms come in many different colours to be very attractive for children. Color is by far the most important aspect of a good uniform.

3. Clothing For Sports

Every good sports team needs a great uniform. Depending on the weather conditions, you will want a uniform that can be tough. Of course, toughness is only one of many aspects you will want your sports clothing to be – the clothing must also be able to stand up to the test of time. Being machine washable and having the ability to let air breathe in the clothing is also a big plus.

4. Corporation Uniforms

If you intend to use uniforms within your workforce, be sure to do research before ordering to make sure your employees get the best possible tools. With these helpful tips, you should have no problem picking out the perfect uniform for your needs.

5. School Uniforms

Across the world uniforms are worn in schools. School uniform varies from a standard issue T-shirt to rigorous requirements for many items of formal wear at private schools.

Countries with school uniforms mandated include India, Korea and the UK, as well as many other places. In some countries uniform types vary a lot from school to school, but in the UK most pupils under the age of 16 wear a formal jacket, tie and trousers for boys and similarly smart clothes for girls.
