College Degree at Home ...why go to college?

By Peter J. Loughlin, J.D., LL. M

Finding the right college degree at home program can be one of the most confusing and important decisions you'll ever make. There are accredited online colleges, unaccredited schools and universities, privately accredited institutions, foreign accreditation and so on. For some adult learners accreditation may not be important but it can be an essential element if your goal is to enter a career that demands your college degree at home (or elsewhere) be "fully accredited."

You need then to consider if your online college degree at home will be sufficient to enter your chosen career or advanced study in a profession such as law, medicine, business, engineering, psychology, etc. It all depends upon your needs and ultimately the requirements of your intended profession. While some unaccredited college degree programs are outstanding, you don't want to waste two to four years or more (plus a lot of money) only to find out your degree will not be acceptable to an employer or graduate program.

Many adult earners enroll in online college degree programs not to earn a degree, but rather to earn a certificate or diploma demonstrating their expertise in a particular field of study. In fact, this is probably a very good way of testing the waters to see if an online college degree or a particular distance learning college is for you and is compatible with your expectations.

Don't overlook the fact that you may already have racked up some college credit for your life experience. Yes, that's right, many college degree at home programs will offer you an opportunity to have your experiences and skills evaluated to see if they qualify for college credit. Why not take full advantage of this option? Who knows, you may already have earned an associates degree and be well on your way to completing a bachelor degree.

Associate degrees are typically two-year college degrees, but by having your experiential learning evaluated and perhaps taking a few credit by examination tests such as CLEP, DAN TES, and other such programs, you can accelerate your online college degree—and your career. And, don't forget that the same strategy will work for a four-year program as well. Some traditional colleges also offer credit by examination, but, by and large, the college degree by distance learning programs are more open to this concept.

College Degree at Home ...why go to college?

In summary, you must choose the right college degree at home program. It is well worth the effort of checking out any college before you enroll and risk your time and money. Be certain that your university is one that will meet your career and professional goals and, more importantly, one that will ultimately satisfy YOU. Gather all the information you can about the distance learning college offering degrees in your area of interest. Learn about their credit by examination programs and policy on awarding credit for experiential learning.

Online College Degree – The Choice Of Today

By Joyce Jackson

Online college degree programs are rapidly becoming the mode of learning education of choice among teens and young adults. Empirical evidence would suggest that there are five principal reasons why this may be the case:

Convenience The Number 1 reason why teens and young adults are choosing to do online college degree programs is convenience. Here, in nearly all cases, respondents claim juggling their already busy lives with college means that an online college degree is their mode of choice when it comes to higher learning.

Flexible Aside from being extremely convenient, and in conjunction with the convenience factor, an online college degree permits teens and young adults the chance to take the online college degree at their own pace, and also more options when it comes to available courses to chose from.

No on-campus presence Combining convenience with flexibility for teens and young adults is the fact that many online college degree programs do not require on-campus presence, or minimal on-campus presence. To many online students, this is the best of both world's – home study with a recognized higher education certificate.

Availability Teens and young adults argue their claim to preferring to study for online college degree programs due to the fact that doing their studies online means they can study at a prestigious institution, without actually having to be physically present. Consequently, living on the East Coast no longer has mean that you have to study your college degree program on the east coast or else move to elsewhere. Now we live in the virtual world, you really can be in two places at once!

Financial Although tuition fees for an online college degree can be competitive when compared with traditional education fees, the fact that the online degree is both flexible and off-campus means teens and young adults (and their families) can arrange for the financing more easily and effectively – without having to make major sacrifices to their every day living.

All of the above make for good reasons to study for an online college degree. However, don't confuse the above as meaning an online college degree is easy. As with all forms of higher learning, it's not – it just provides you with an easier means of learning, not an easier learning program!
