DANGER! Beware! by Cathy Wagner

You wouldn't think that using free advertising online could be dangerous, but it can. Email advertising is DANGEROUS! Don't be fooled into thinking you have to send hundreds of thousands of messages per day to be at risk.

THE FACTS

I know of three different cases recently where people have just lost their web sites due to SPAM related issues with no warning or notification. They have been given no way to argue the matter; as far as their ISPs are concerned they are done, out of business, with no appeal or refund for their prepaid service.

Case 1: The web site owner was mailing about 25,000 messages once per week with a 5% undeliverable rate. Sounds like a lot, but he was entitled to send those messages. As the owner of an FFA page, people who post ads to his site agree to receive email from him in return for placing their free ad.

Case 2: The web site owner was sending only about 1,000 messages once per week! He was entitled to mail to those people as part of a paid service he had joined and was averaging a 6% undeliverable rate.

Case 3: This web site owner was not sending out large mailings at all! She was, however, receiving a very large of amount of safelist mail.

WHOA!

What is happening here?! Clearly, SPAM is reaching epidemic proportions and the result could well be the death of email advertising, which is widely regarded as THE most effective form of online advertising.

Host providers are under increasing pressure to control SPAM; too many complaints can get a host shut down. Also, the amount of resources it takes for servers to send large amounts of mail, handle undeliverable messages and even maintain accounts with a lot of mail can put an incredible drain on host providers. They have to be vigilant in controlling the amount of mail their clients send and receive.

DON'T LET THIS HAPPEN TO YOU!

The days when you could buy a list of email addresses and send your ad to them with impunity are gone. It is far too risky today to send mass mailings from your own ISP. Even using another email account can be risky; SPAM complaints can (and do) shut down advertised programs all the time. If ONE person complains to everyone they can think of about receiving your message, your offer can be taken offline with very little, if any, warning.

DO'S AND DON'TS

If you use any form of free advertising online, you will get mail in return. After all, there is no such thing as a free lunch; the mail you receive is the price you pay to advertise for free. Read the terms of service! Do not post to free ads to sites that allow all of their members to send you an email confirmation. This will cut down on the amount of mail you receive and it will eliminate the temptation to reply to all those messages, which would be SPAM. While you agree to receive mail by placing your ad, the people who send confirmations DO NOT agree to receive your mail. You may not like it, but that is how it is set up. If you do not wish to receive confirmation emails, do not use free advertising sites.

Do not use email address collecting software. I receive mail to accounts that are not published anywhere except on my web site for things like password retrieval. These messages usually say something like, "Thank you for posting your link to my site," but I know that this address was never used to post any ads. I also know that this person who sent the message will not be in business for long. While I am not crazy about SPAM, I generally do not complain; I use the delete button and for me, that's the end of it. But, there are so many people, especially newbies, who absolutely flip over SPAM and I know that one of these people will complain to everyone they can get a hold of and this SPAMMER's operation and perhaps even their opportunity will be shut down soon.

Even safelists are not totally safe anymore. In every one of the cases listed above, the site owner was receiving a huge amount of safelist mail from over 100 lists. While not nearly as effective as having your own opt-in list, safelists may seem like the ideal solution, but ISP's do not always agree. They know that no one could possibly read hundreds and hundreds of messages everyday and they are increasingly aware of the amount of resources being used to maintain full and nearly full mailboxes; they do not want to bear that burden. They ask why should they have to pay for your free advertising. If you use safelists, limit the number you use and do not send them to your primary mail account, send them to a free email account and empty that account regularly!

There are services out there that will mail your ad for you from their servers and they will even provide the addresses, but these are not free and there is still some danger. Generally, bulk email services will recommend that you do not include a URL for your offer in your message, they encourage you to provide a free email address in your message where people can write for more information. This, they say, insures that your ISP and your program or offer are safe: if someone complains the most that can happen is your free email account gets shut down.

BUT I THOUGHT.

DANGER! Beware!

Remember, when gurus tell you that email advertising is the most effective form of advertising online, they are talking about sending mail to your own opt-in list, that means to people who have specifically requested your INFORMATION. No one is signing up just to get ads, unless it is a safelist, and you don't get those addresses. The idea of email advertising is not to inundate the world with your advertisement, no one wants that and if you think about it, you don't want to be inundated with other people's ads either. You need to take the time to build your OWN opt-in list.

If you are looking for a shortcut to having your own email list by buying one, or if you are mailing to every address you can find everyday (or even every week), you are headed for serious trouble. You could lose your site, you could take down whatever it is you are promoting with you, AND you are contributing to a problem that is totally out of control.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

The truth is, beginners should forget about mass email advertising to begin with. Practice ad writing by using a few free safelists.

Create an autoresponder series that people can opt-in for. Be sure your topic is of interest to a wide group of people, you have an informative title and also, that you provide useful information. This is not as hard as it sounds, but it does take some effort. Presumably you are selling a wonderful product that answers an important need for the general population. Your title should project the single best benefit that your product offers and the message series should describe the problem and provide the solution via your offer. It doesn't have to be 10 messages (although at least seven is recommended); you could talk about one specific angle or benefit of your product in each message with an overall recap for the last.

Also, don't forget that there are lots of other ways to advertise online. I have heard many people complain that FFA's and free classified ads do not work, but I know that they do. I recommend an FFA page that has sent me 60 visitors within the 2 hours that my link was visible! The people who say these advertising forms are worthless are generally those who do not have the ad writing skills necessary to make surfers click or they are using automated submission services which allow your ad to slip off the page without ever being seen by human eyes. If you can't get people to click on your free ads, odds are people will not click through your email ads either. Do not pay for a mass emailing service before you are confident of your ad writing skills.

8 Danger Signals To Foretell You Are On The Debt Road

By Sebastian Schneider

Debt consolidation is a major concern throughout the world. There are many things that one needs to watch for to avoid this malady and this stands true for all types of people. The article will try to highlight a few danger signals which can foretell that you are on the debt road - so you can recognize them and straighten things out.

Danger signal 1 Your credit card expenses increase while your income is the same or decreasing. When this happens stop using your cards and manage on whatever cash you have available. Stop when the cash is finished unless there is a great emergency - do not take out the cards. Diminishing income will suffer greatly if the bills of the credit card are added to it; get away from card shopping till your income stabilizes.

Danger signal 2 You are unable to pay more than your minimum balance on the card debts; this is when it should be obvious that cash problem has started; this is the time when you should leave the credit cards and try to pay off all your outstanding by wise financial management.

Danger signal 3 You find yourself borrowing on one card to pay on another. This is the message that you are entering unmanageable debt - so take charge and control all unnecessary expenses right away. Try to pay off the debt of one card and use only one card - that also only in acute emergency.

Danger signal 4 You observe that you have more than 5–6 credit cards. Ideally, you should not have or use more than two credit cards. There are many who advocate the use of only one card while - if you have more - you can keep the rest locked for any emergency. When you have too many operational cards, you can very easily overspend and find yourself in a financial mess.

DANGER! Beware!

Danger signal 5 You are finding that you are using your credit more and more for emergency payments - and the emergency payments include grocery bills. The moment you include in the emergency payment list ordinary purchases, you should understand that something is seriously.

Danger signal 6 Your credit card payments keep you working overtime - if you observe that you do not have sufficient funds to cover your credit card payments - that means you are extending your income to your credit card limits - this is a definitely a danger signal.

Danger signal 7 You are at limit of all your credit cards. When you find yourself to have topped the limits of your credit cards -this obviously shows you that your income is not sufficient to take care of your expenses - and or you are spending too much.

Danger signal 8 You are gambling and paying the debts with the credit cards. Never ever pay your gambling debts with the credit cards because this will really create an egg-and-chicken vicious circle from where you will never get out.
