DUI Lawyer: How To Fight DUI Charges

By Stu Pearson

If you are charged with Driving Under the Influence (DUI), it can be terrifying and humiliating. Thus, an accused person may wish to fight such charges.

DUI charges have far-reaching effects. Those convicted of drunk driving may not only lose their job, but also end up with a prison sentence. And a DUI charge sits on a person's criminal record forever and will always have an effect on his or her life, maybe even inhibiting future job aspirations.

If you are accused of a DUI, a caliber DUI lawyer can help you undergo the seemingly overwhelming legal ordeals at hand. An expert DUI lawyer will invest a great deal of time and effort into your case and lead you through the maze of court proceedings, hopefully winning you a verdict of "not guilty" or at least, negotiating a lesser charge.

Some DUI lawyers offer free consultation and legal advice and it is here that the facts, from the day of arrest to the day you were put into police custody, are reviewed. Every bit of information can help a lawyer to design your case.

A lawyer will also go over all the potential issues that may be brought up in a courtroom setting and inform you of the various procedures you will have to go through. As well, a lawyer will map out an outline of different options for winning the case, to make the process as simple as possible. So, it is better to listen and follow your lawyer instructions.

It is very important to have the right DUI Lawyer for your case. You will feel much more confident about your situation once you sit down with a lawyer specializing in the crime you've been accused of but the success of your case will almost always depend on the validity of the charges.

Caught Drunk Driving? How To Find A DUI Lawyer

By Stu Pearson

The very moment you get your first car is also the moment you sign on to obey the slue of road laws out there. One of these laws is the Driving Under the Influence Law or DUI, also known as Driving While Intoxicated (DWI). Different states have different definitions of this law but the most important thing to know is DUI law is the one car owners most commonly violate.

Car accidents due to drunk driving have increased in numbers over the year and no matter how strict or lenient the DUI laws are in your state, the consequences are all the same: severe and life-changing.

If you have been accused of breaking a DUI law, you can find a lawyer that specializes in such things to help you with your case. DUI lawyers in your area can be found online and family, friends, or ideally a family lawyer, can also refer you.

Each state has a different legal limit for blood alcohol content level (BAC). But in general, if a motorist's BAC exceeds .08%, he or she is violating DUI law. Depending on the situation, those convicted of drunk driving can endure punishments that range from a suspension or revocation of a license to a long stay in prison.

The average consequence, at least in forty-five states in America, is that those who have committed DUI offenses are permitted to drive again, but only if their vehicles are equipped with ignition interlocks, sophisticated equipment that tests a driver's breath for alcohol content.

This device requires a driver to blow into a small handheld alcohol sensor that is attached to the dashboard. As long as the driver's BAC is a legal percentage, then the car will start - otherwise, it won't. Occasionally, the ignition interlock will even check a person's breath while he or she is driving. This clever device allows drunk driving offenders to continue their life and responsibilities, whilst reminding them of their mistakes and forcing them to drive only when sober.

Depending on the age of a DUI offender, punishment and sentencing varies. A qualified DUI lawyer can explain any details and advise you on the legal remedies available.

Never hesitate to contact a DUI lawyer to handle your case; bear in mind that DUI laws are carefully geared to convict violators.
