

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

Do You "Do" Voices?

By Jessica Albon

Do You "Do" Voices? by Jessica Albon

Do You "Do" Voices?

Copyright 2003, The Write Exposure

When you write an article, is it all about you? Your thoughts, your insights, your opinions, your voice? Or do you include other people's voices in the form of interviews and research?

If your articles are nothing but a monologue, it's time to start adding voices.

Voices make your piece more compelling. They make you look more knowledgeable. Plus, they're visually appealing. "Readers love quotes," says Marjorie, a freelance writer. "What's more," she says, "they impart texture. No two people talk the same way."

How do you go about getting quotes? Here are some of the ways we do it at The Write Exposure:

Ask people you know. "Talk to customers, employees, and friends. Everyone likes to be quoted," reports Daniel "what-are-you-writing-about-and-can-I-be-quoted-in-it" an accountant with The Write Exposure.

Ask people you don't know. "After I've exhausted my network, I pull out the yellow pages," Marjorie says. "I just start at the top of the listings and work my way down. I always find someone to talk to before I make call number six."

Surf the Internet. "I love interviewing online," Greg, a desktop publisher, says. "It's quick and easy. You don't have to worry about misquoting someone and it enables me to interview, like, someone in Bangladesh or Australia."

Use a resource. "Lots of people like ProfNet.com, because it's online," David, a journalist, says. "But I prefer [the printed version of] The Yearbook because I can skim through it and something always catches my eye."

Do You "Do" Voices?

Ask someone else. For myself, I often find all the leads I turn up doing research lead to more leads. The trick is to end each interview with a request for another source. "Who knows almost as much about this topic as you do?" or "Who has the worst argument for why you're wrong?" often work well. Make sure you're talking to people on both sides of the issue so that your article will be well-balanced.

Quotes are the spice for your piece. The, as Marjorie said, "texture." They show you've done your research and that you're not the only one who feels a certain way. They also add visual interest. In fact, some readers only read articles with quotation marks in them. So go to the trouble to find a few extra quotes. Your reader will appreciate it.

Is it your job to increase company profits? The Write Exposure offers the resources you need to do just that at <http://www.designdoodles.com>

Girls Gone MILD

By Stanley J. Leffew

Girls Gone MILD by Stanley J. Leffew

Voices!

So many voices crying out for adherence and so many people confused about values, virtues and life.

What voices are calling out to you and what voices are you listening to?

My daughter is just now enjoying her first year in life. As I listen to the voices calling out to young ladies these days, I can't help but wonder what the popular trend will be when she has to decide which voices she will lend an ear to.

As she enters young adulthood, I hope this is what she finds.

I hope the popular trend of the day is a video craze called, "Girls Gone MILD!"

No, that's not a misprint!

I hope it is popular because it depicts women in the following ways:

- * As more than full-of-brandy eye candy and toys-for-boys
- * As pillars in the community instead of pillows for the community
- * As being more concerned about innocence lost than being "not that innocent"
- * As valuing their bodies and it shows by how they use them instead of showing them using their bodies to be valued
- * As valuing being wanted for a lifetime of nights and not just a night of a lifetime
- * As adhering to the belief in moral decency instead of the belief that it is indecent to be moral

Do You "Do" Voices?

* As being applauded more for lifting their skills to the world than lifting their skirts

High hopes, you say!

Yes, maybe high hopes, maybe wishful thinking, or maybe I'm just adding my voice to the mix.

Stanley J. Leffew is the Author of, "How To Be Wanted For a Lifetime of Nights and Not Just a Night of a Lifetime". Now available as a FREE PDF Ebook, you can grab your copy and see what happens when one leads-with-the-body in life and relationships by visiting <http://advice-for-lifetime-relationships.com>

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!