Do You Need A Day Off? Six Great Ideas! 2004-08-30 by eRix

How to take a day off?! 2004-08-30

Every beginning webmaster's dream is to have a successful website right off the bat. This successful site would enable us to pay the bills, feed the kids, and then pay for that dream get-away or high-ticket item we set up as a benefit of our financial goals. But every webmaster knows that to have a successful website, it is a commitment that knows no other. The love affair between the perfectly laid out front-page and the total disregard for time and proper rest, begets the most fundamental laws of logic. How can a human being survive on two hours of sleep? How can a human being remember so many passwords and IDs? How can a human being convince somebody to buy something, when every thing you say has already been said? Logic rests that you will become like all of the other mediocre webmasters unless you can find one attribute that sets you apart from the rest.

How can a stay-at-home webmaster even think about competing with the corporate web machines?

Basically, you buy a laptop computer with wireless internet capabilities, attach it to your lap, and then build and promote your website(s) twenty-two hours a day; that leaves approximately 2 hours for proper rest, nutrition, and family inter-action. This webmaster schedule is not a joke. It happens to millions of us, every day! Seven days a week! Inside is this tremendous feeling that if you take one day off from promoting your website, then the traffic you build will come to a halt, sales will fall, and the bills do not get paid. Every World Wide Web Entrepreneur has had to have had this feeling before.

How can a stay-at-home webmaster even think straight after the endless hours of endless hours?

I believe that most webmasters could relieve some of the stress from the day-in and day-out promotion of a website, if they could learn to take a day off. With the so-called luxury of working from a home office, sometimes it is hard to not work every day—albeit some workday hours are longer than others; therefore, it seems logical that the stay-at-home business person really needs to schedule a day during the week in which the person stays completely away from the building or promotion of their websites. You always dreamed of having a website goliath that runs on auto-pilot 24/7, well, now is the chance to learn what it feels like to trust your work and let your website work for you for one day. This time away from the computer doing other things can possibly lead you to a new direction or exciting idea to add to your website, TOMORROW!

Here are a few ideas of things to do on your scheduled day off:

- Convince your child to hold a worm for the first time.
- Go to the mall with your family or another person.
- Go to a park and watch other people walking their dogs.

- Volunteer your time to a cause greater than yourself.
- Tell every person you come in contact with to `Have a Great Day!'
- Just do something that does not involve computers!

Start Up Your Passion: Startup Ideas From My Home-Based Business Advisor

By Terry Nicholls

Where can I get free startup ideas to help start my home business? What possible ideas can I come up? I don't know anything. I can't do anything. I have no skills.

Sound familiar? I went through the same thing many times myself. But don't worry, My Home-Based Business Advisor has you covered. We're going to help you come up with lots of startup ideas.

First of all, everyone knows something, or can do something, that someone else would like to know or be able to do.

Second, and this is extremely important, you must do something that you like! I can't emphasize this enough. If you pick a startup idea that looks profitable but isn't something that you will like doing every day, then you're setting yourself up for a lot of frustration and, eventually, failure. You won't stick with it because you don't like it!

It's easier than you think to come up with ideas for your business startup that you will actually like to do! It's called brainstorming.

Brainstorming Startup Ideas

To get you started, take out a notebook or pad of paper and a pencil. Now, write down what you're passionate about what do you like to do in your spare time? what do you talk about most? read about?

Do you have a hobby? Write it down. What are your natural talents? Write them down, too.

What expertise do you have from your job? What do you do every day automatically, without thinking about it? Remember, being a full-time mother and housewife (it's not a bad word, you know) is a job in itself. Again, what do you do every day without even thinking about it? Write it all down.

See what we're getting at here? All these things are possible business startup ideas. Things you like. Things you enjoy doing.

More Specific Startup Ideas

The Internet has changed the face of business forever. Yes, you can do business without it. But your competition doesn't, and pretty soon you'll realize that they're more successful than you because of it. You can market products or services directly over the Internet or simply use your website to generate extra publicity for your local customers. Here are five of the most popular (and profitable) business startup ideas: Sell Information Sell A Product You Make Buy Low, Sell High(er) Be An Affiliate Create Your Own Expert Site
