Documented Origins of Political Correctness

Documented Origins of Political Correctness by Rob Smith

The first published use of the term political correctness was in 1912 in Chapter 1 of Senator Robert LaFollette's Autobiography . Speaking of his education at the University of Wisconsin, he says "In those days we did not so much get correct political and economic views, for there was then little teaching of sociology or political economy worthy the name".

Sen. La Follette of Wisconsin later ran for President in 1924 on the Progressive Party platform. The University of Wisconsin Madison campus has often been cited as the birthplace of political correctness. Donna Shalala, former Clinton Secretary of Health & Human Services and University of Wisconsin Chancellor has been called the founder of political correctness.

Here is an extended excerpt of the passage:

It is difficult, indeed, to overestimate the part which the university has played in the Wisconsin revolution. For myself, I owe what I am and what I have done largely to the inspiration I received while there. It was not so much the actual courses of study which I pursued; it was rather the spirit of the institution—a high spirit of earnest endeavor, a spirit of fresh interest in new things, and beyond all else a sense that somehow the state and the university were intimately related, and that they should be of mutual service.

The guiding spirit of my time, and the man to whom Wisconsin owes a debt greater than it can ever pay, was its President, John Bascom.

I never saw Ralph Waldo Emerson, but I should say that John Bascom was a man of much his type, both in appearance and in character. He was the embodiment of moral force and moral enthusiasm; and he was in advance of his time in feeling the new social forces and in emphasizing the new social responsibilities. His addresses to the students on Sunday afternoons, together with his work in the classroom, were among the most important influences in my early life. It was his teaching, iterated and reiterated, of the obligation of both the university and the students to the mother state that may be said to have originated the Wisconsin idea in education. He was forever telling us what the state was doing for us and urging our return obligation not to use our education wholly for our own selfish benefit, but to return some service to the state. That teaching animated and inspired hundreds of students who sat under John Bascom. The present President of the university, Charles R. Van Hise, a classmate of mine, was one of the men who has nobly handed down the tradition and continued the teaching of John Bascom.

In those days we did not so much get correct political and economic views, for there was then little teaching of sociology or political economy worthy the name, but what we somehow did get, and largely from Bascom, was a proper attitude toward public affairs. And when all is said, this attitude is more important than any definite views a man may hold.

Storms are Coming

Terry Dashner

We've been studying Ezekiel's prophecy in chapters 38 and 39. This study has enriched our lives and expanded our knowledge as to the imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ. Before I go any further let me say this: Please be advised and get your house in order for the coming of Jesus. He is ready to come, even now at the door.

I thought I would highlight some of the points made this past Wednesday evening. For one, it seems the question has been raised for many years—what force could possibly bind together all those northern alliances that Ezekiel speaks about, coming against Israel in the last days? Wednesday we delved into the study of Gog, Magog, Tubal, Ethiopia, and etc. to discover where they are and what nations they comprise today. Please keep in mind that these nations were merely tribes when Ezekiel prophesied about them. (How do prophets know these things?)

We discovered from our study that the one binding force galvanizing these various nations against Israel was Islam. I know that for political correctness' sake some would like for me to forget history and preach that Islam is a peaceful religion. However, its history and current day operations speak otherwise. For example, recently a young American citizen was arrested and turned over to American authorities for allegedly plotting and assassination attempt against President Bush. As it turns out, according to Fox News, the suspect was heavily influenced—maybe even trained in one of Saudi Arabia's hate academies. The academies spew hatred and contempt toward Israel and Christians. These academies are Muslim indoctrinated academies. This is a sad state of affairs. But, could it be Bible prophecy coming alive before our very eyes?

Documented Origins of Political Correctness

Another point I wish to make is found in this week's Time magazine (February 14, 2005). The cover story is entitled, "The Merchant of Menace." A.Q. Khan of Pakistan, currently under house arrest, has been actively soliciting buyers of nuclear technology for weapons to use against the west, namely America and Israel (Imagine that). And which nations was he selling to? You guessed it. Nations with Islamic regimes. He believes that all Muslim countries should have nuclear weapons to counter the power of the west, particularly the United States. The recent analysis of his black market work is staggering and has prompted the writing of the article.

And, then again, a final note. Recently a Russian scientist has come forward and declared the Asian SAARS virus to be laboratory manufactured virus, developed by the Chinese for biological weapons' use. This is wicked. The support for his claim is that the virus of SAARS is a "hybrid" virus, a genetic cross between human and animal origins. By the way, hybrid viruses can only be made in scientific laboratories. They are not naturally occurring viruses.

Truly, this is a time to look up. Could Jesus be coming soon? God is putting all things together regarding the "Time of the Gentiles." World gentile powers that God has raised up and torn down since the time of the ancient Assyrians is coming to a close for His purposes. When the true Church of Jesus Christ is snatched away with the sounding of the last trumpet, then His purpose will revisit the Covenant Nation—Israel. He will serve Israel with perfect justice which He has promised her since the beginning of time while wicked powers ruled over her. He will culminate His justice with the 10000 year reign of Jesus and the coming Great White Throne Judgment. Remember, God does all things well!

Keep the faith. Stay the course. Jesus is coming soon.
