Don't Leave 'em Starving

By Raquel S. Hunter

One day, every one of us will leave this beautiful planet and head into the unknown. We don't want to think about it. We often say, 'if something happens to me...', when in reality we should say, 'when something happens to me...!'

The worst thing you can do to your loved ones is leave this planet without life insurance. This is especially true for adults who are the sole breadwinner for their family. If an adult who is the sole breadwinner for his family suddenly dies without life insurance, his dependents are going to have to find another way to pay the bills. If the dependents are young children, the guardian of the children will be able to collect social security. However, it could take months to receive the first social security payment.

If a male has female dependents and no life insurance, when the male dies, the women are in jeopardy of being thrust into poverty.

Why should you get life insurance?

Life insurance will alleviate the severity of the financial problems that may occur. Life insurance will help make sure that your loved ones have enough money to pay the bills when you die.

But what if my job gives me life insurance?

If your job offers life insurance, take it. But don't rely on it as your only type of life insurance. If you leave the job, or are fired from the job, you will no longer have life insurance. Also, after someone dies, you may not receive the life insurance offered by their job until 30 days after the person dies. This is way too long to wait when you need to pay for funeral arrangements.

Get life insurance now. The younger you are when you purchase life insurance, the lower your monthly payment will be.

Don't Leave Me Now

By Emmanuel Emesakoru

Don't Leave Me Now by Emmanuel Emesakoru

Don't leave me now lest my sweet breath would cease
Don't leave me now else my whole body would freeze
Don't leave me now that I'm crying on my hurting knees
Else I may never give my heart away again on lease

If you leave me right here and walk away from my life
I'd not even think about slitting my throat with a knife
This life will still go on and I'll definitely remain alive
But without you right here how do you want me to survive

Can't you see I trust you with every bit and inch of my heart
And never ever want to imagine the both of us live apart
If you leave today I shall never find another to believe
That's why I'm still begging you to stay and never leave
