Frugal, Free, and Cheap: Finding a Goldmine Online

By Dylan Miles

When the Internet first began everything was free. In fact, that was the basic philosophy of the Internet: the creation of a worldwide community that would share freely all sorts of facts, figures, programs, help, advice, and everything in between. But ever since big business hit the Internet things have changed. Now, it is difficult to find anything for free. But don't despair. There are websites dedicated to the philosophy of frugal living. These sites can direct you to hundreds and thousands of free or discounted things on the Internet.

How to find free stuff online

It's so simple. You can find all sorts of free and discounted stuff or coupons that will secure great savings. Here are a selection of some of the best sites for frugal and free stuff. For more, simply run a simple search for frugal and free stuff on your favorite Internet browser.

Coolsavings.com is a great site and can link you to grocery coupons, pet coupons, free samples, diet offers, travel coupons, and more.

Thefrugalshopper.com lists hundreds of freebies, hundreds of free eBooks, and coupons. It also tells you which online stores offer free shipping; a great way to save money on your purchases.

If you sign up with Eversave.com you'll be able to get free coupons, samples, and exclusive offers from top name American brands.

Peerflix.com gets you connected with movie lovers where you can swap and share DVD movies.

Frugal, Free, and Cheap: Finding a Goldmine Online

Frugalsimplicity.com boasts that it is "your guide to living better, on less". And it's true! You can download free software for yourself and your kids. Stock your computer with software to help your kids at school and to help you create a more professional business image. Pick up free tips on gardening and home schooling, and even advice on how to set up a business from home.

And if you are working from home, improve your professional image and order a set of free business cards from Vistaprint.com.

Acres of Gold

By Nicholas Dixon

A few years ago I stumbled upon a goldmine. Now this precious commodity was not something that you could touch, but rather one to look at. This goldmine has made more successes out of the average man than any other vessel in history.

This goldmine is so obvious many of us miss it or take it for granted. What could it be ? The internet !

With a good computer, an internet connection and your creativity you can do so much. There are countless ways in which you can display your talents for the world to see.

There have been countless life changing inventions throughout history. The net deserves to be among the most innovative. Anyone from a ten year old to your Grandpa can use it to their advantage.

It is changing lives. The Internet can be like a drug, it may not hook you the first time. But as you start to use it regularly, you can't seem to live without it (that's me alright!).

And what's best about it is that it belongs to everyone. Not the government, nor corporations or secret societies. It is for us all to have.

We should be careful what purposes we use it for though. It can be used to educate, inform and communicate to improve people's lives. Don't use it for wrongful purposes. Why create a shortcut when you can blaze a trail ?

Go ahead and discover that goldmine under your nose. It may not glitter but it is certainly not fool's gold.

To your success and mine..... ,

Nicholas
