Get To Know The Discipline Of Picking The Right Golf Clubs

By Golf HQ

Golf trainers who have been to high level training sessions, such as any PGA program, know the discipline of picking the right golf clubs.

These trainers also know how to understand the effects of the body's movement in respect to the golf club being used. Trainers act as consultants, giving important tips to their students. It is easy to fall prey to marketing hype, however. If your trainer favours only one brand, this is a sign that he may be just riding the hype. It is better to find golf trainers who are flexible in their choice of brands. This is a good sign of objectivity.

Luckily, common golf players are becoming more and more knowledgeable in getting the right equipment. Attribute this to the many shows on TV providing guides to the audience.

Common knowledge dictates that golf equipment, especially golf clubs, have a very strong influence on your game. Having substandard equipment can be a headache for trainers in teaching their students. Remember, a poorly constructed golf club, for example, does not do its job well. If you work with this ugly equipment, you will be forced to compromise form to compensate for the insufficiencies of the club, resulting in poor form, and eventually, bad habits.

Bear in mind that all golfers need correctly designed golf clubs in order to play the game in the right way. When you swing forward you produce a centrifugal force that leads your hands and club shaft into a linear angle that hits the ball. This is the natural motion of our bodies. A bad golf club can and will distort this natural motion.

Quality golf clubs are, aside from being efficient in design, also durable in temperament. Golf clubs, when made with high quality materials, should last you quite a while. These are viewed as investments. Substandard golf clubs tend to be cheaper and easily get broken.

If you do have a good trainer, he should impart to you the importance of a good investment. Many golf clubs out there are reasonably priced and have a very high level of quality in terms of craftsmanship. Value for money is your main goal. You need not jump into expensive brand names at once.

Finding Custom Golf Clubs For You

By Luke Cameron

Golf clubs are indeed very important equipment. If you don't have clubs, how can you play? However, there are some people who are not choosy when it comes to using the correct golf clubs. Sometimes they complain about getting bad backs or body ache after a sub par game. Sometimes they are not even playing to their full capacity because of an ill-fitting golf club.

Yes, you read that right. Golf clubs also need to "fit" the golfer. Professional golfers use custom clubs. Does that mean you have to spend hundreds or thousands of dollars to have custom clubs? Definitely not! There are ways around it. You can find the perfect set of golf clubs for you without spending too much. You only need to know a few things to be able to find the one that suits you and your game perfectly.

The length of the club is a major consideration when buying a golf club. However, the pros are much more concerned about the size of the golf club's grip. This is because the grip should be comfortable for the player's hands. There are some clubs that are made for women, and the grips of these clubs are smaller.

If you would really want to get a set of custom clubs, then by all means go for it! However, you should keep in mind that a process is involved in making custom golf clubs. You have to go through a fitting session when you decided to purchase a custom set of clubs. The fitting sessions does not only take your body measures! Your stance, grip and swing are also taken into account.

Most of the time, people who are taller or shorter than most golfers really need to have custom golf clubs. This is a must if you are a pro. You have to consider the time and energy spent on bad grips, bad swings and overall bad playing just because your club is giving you a hard time.

What about "off the shelf" golf clubs? Well, these clubs may be satisfactory, but they will not exactly let you play to your fullest potential.

If you are a serious golfer then you really need to consider getting yourself fitted for a custom set. Just weigh the pros and the cons. I am very sure that if you have enough to spend for an extra "off the shelf" golf club set, well, you would rather get a custom golf club set that will help you play golf to your maximum level.
