Good Dog Health Starts Early

Good Dog Health Starts Early by John Schwartz

Good long-term dog health has many causes, but the one common factor is an owner who takes his puppy care duties seriously right from the start. It's no coincidence that in study after study, veterinarians and animal scientists report that when dog health is a primary concern of the owner from the outset, that pet often lives longer and suffers fewer canine diseases. The clear message to owners: put good puppy care at the top of your list from the moment you get your new friend home.

The first step to ensuring excellent dog health for the life of your furry friend is to get him checked out by a vet within a few days of bringing him home. Most doctors will recommend a puppy care regimen consisting of a series of vaccinations in the early months and good nutrition from the beginning.

While a dog's psychological needs might make many readers scoff, it's important to understand that proper dog health includes bonding with owners in a loving environment. That's why puppy care involves more than just shots and food. Stress, both physical AND mental, can wreak havoc on a new puppy's immune system, for example, which makes him more susceptible to many canine diseases (mange, distemper, parvovirus).

Finally, don't forget your dog's teeth in the overall dog health picture. A good puppy care plan includes lots of hard bones and crunchy treats to chew on regularly – preferably healthy versions, not typical pet store biscuits.

Quality Dog Food Is Essential For The Health Of Dogs

Good Dog Health Starts Early

Dog food is very important for the health of dogs. It is easy to overlook it, but it is essential to pick the right dog food for your pet dog. People sometimes just pick the first dog food bag they see at the store, instead of considering what is needed for your own dog. Puppies need different types of food than mature dogs, just as different breeds of dogs also require different types of dog food. If your dog seems like it has no energy, consider switching to another type of dog food. If you are unsure what kind to buy, you should consult your veterinarian.

Dog Food should be healthy and tasty.

If your dog does not like a certain type of dog food, do not force your dog to eat it. Instead, try to find another type of dog food that has all the vitamins that your dog needs, and your dog enjoys eating. Also, be aware that your dog's taste may change over time, and may not necessarily eat the same dog food all of its life. If it does not like its current dog food, then buy some other types of brands, and see which one is its favorite.
