Help online for free. The Stiffsteiff Bears help site. by Malcolm James Pugh

The purpose of this website is to help. Purely and simply to help anyone out there with anything they do not understand. Whether from a how to do it angle, or where to go to get it angle, or why are things this way angle. It tries to take away the fear of the unknown by making things clear, by putting forward people who can be trusted, by putting out opinions and possible helplines to get us all through a very tough world. It is an attempt to show that someone can be bothered to do something for you for nothing, that there are people who can help you, if you have the fire to help yourself. It is an unfair world and we must learn to survive in it and accept it as it is. There is too much emphasis placed on money and escapism, and too little placed on being happy with what you have and using your own common sense to approach problems, instead of running away from them or avoiding them via substances of one form or another.

There is also an abundance of friends websites, and their businesses, as a known place to go which is as far as I am concerned secure, honest and good.

There are adventures of a slightly sinister bunch of Teddy Bears for the kid in all of us, and for a laugh in a grim world.

There are wonderful photos, model trains, cars of quality. There is a medieval bowman, and a wedding venue unparalleled.

There is free advice on how to build your own website, how to index it, and how to get a glow of fifteen minutes of fame when you first see your own website appear on Google.

But the main aim is HELP.

If you have any kind of problem, chances are it can be alleviated a little here, at the Stiffsteiff teddy bear site for myself and other welcome guests.

Aged 51, I have been through a tough life, if you need help Ive probably been there too.

tylers lock–history reborn !!

The new site everyone is talking about, and featuring the now massive cult status Stiffsteiff Teddy Bear family, also contains details of this famous Worcestershire landmark. Nestling on the Worcester and Birmingham canal at Tardebigge, this used to be the pump house for the longest flight of locks in Europe, which still exist, and still work perfectly. Until recently the same could not have been said about the Pump House, however, with sheer determination, one of the country's leading chefs has transformed it into a Wedding /special occasion venue extraordinaire, and in the process saved a piece of local history intact and secure. The owners would very much welcome any material whatsoever relating to the Pump House and it's history, especially old photos and maps, which could be scanned and returned by the Stiffsteiff expert, or brought in person.

The Stiffsteiff bears site itself will allow you to LAUGH, and have FUN, without resorting to crudity, smut, or porn. This is somewhere your kids can actually go without you wondering about the content, and they will learn new things through following the bears; gardens, countryside, photography, ponds, walks, National Trust houses. I am sure you would rather have them being interested in proper, real pursuits than being cooped up in their room with a TV and a computer for friends. So through their computer they LEARN there are more worlds than their important seeming virtual world.

For bigger kids there are superb fully downloadable photos, and the originals can be requested and delivered via email.

There are practical, pictorial step by step projects showing how to do various jobs outdoors, ponds, lawns, landscapes, gardens. Also there are computer tips, and an amazing feature where the author of the site, an ex systems programmer will resurrect cds sent to him deemed ruined; so your holiday snaps might well NOT be beyond repair!!

He also fixes pictures, either via email or by scanning in posted snaps, and returning them.

The site can be found by typing Stiffsteiffs or "Tylers lock" into ANY search, or by clicking the link below now.
