ClickBank offers a magnificent service.

I've always used it as my prime payment processor.

It's fast, efficient, and above all, universally accepted.

However, if you promote a multitude of digital products it has one much-heralded drawback.

Either...

1. You are required to fork out another $49 every time you introduce a new creation on a disparate location or...

2. You are required to host all of your merchandise on one website.

Not any more; at least certainly not for me.

You see, I have discovered a safe and legitimate method of selling all of my ever-growing produce using ClickBank on a single fee of $49.

oIt's as easy as pie to implement oIt does not require expertise in HTML

oIt does not involve installing a tricky code

oIt does not deal in troublesome `trapdoors' to make it work

Currently I have 50 info and software products selling through ClickBank (the maximum allowable on a single fee).

If I were to pay $49 per product for the privilege of using the service I would be out of pocket to the tune of $2450.

But I'm not...

Using my secret system I sell them all from MULTIPLE websites on a single fee of $49.

That's a saving of $2401!

If you opt to host all of your produce on a single site to conserve ClickBank processing costs you also choose to deny yourself the power of individual keyword phrasing to attract the search engine spiders – and in consequence – turn your back on reams of targeted visitors to your individual offers.

It simply does not work because you cannot be all things to all people in the world of online marketing; especially so when you have a host of separate order links on one page.

Using my secret system I don't suffer the effects of the ClickBank Drawback.

Each of my products has its own focused website with its own specific order link.

And in total they are all housed in a separate portal site which is not designed to accept orders but to direct targeted prospects to precise solutions.

And all of this on a single fee...

You can learn more about my secret system in the web page listed in the resource box below.

Clickbank Vendors: Two Simple Ways You Can Help Affiliates Protect Their Sales.

By John Hocking

1) How To Remove Your Affiliates Clickbank Id From The URL.

As a merchant, you can hide the clickbank affiliate id for your affiliates by creating a redirect page and pointing your default hoplink to the redirect.

When some uses your hoplink <http://hop.clickbank.net/?affid/yourid>, the cookie will be set and they will land on your redirect page.

The redirect will send them to your domain without adding the ?hop= information. The cookie is already set and does not need to be shown.

This will help protect your affiliates commission and give your site a more professional appearance.

In the code examples below, you will need to replace [and] with less then and greater then symbols.

Create a file called hoplink.php

Add the following code

[?php
header("Location: http://www.yourdomain.com");
exit;
?]

Upload hoplink.php to the root of your domain.

Login into your clickbank account.

Click to view or modify your account settings.

Click to modify your account.

Under Business Info, change the url of your website to be <http://www.yourdomain.com/hoplink.php>

Click on save changes.

Now when a visitor clicks on a hoplink, it appears that they came directly to your site and the affiliate's id is no longer exposed. For this technique to be completely effective, the affiliate needs to cloak the hoplink as well.

2) How to Cloak Your Clickbank Vendor Id Using PHP

Most clickbank affiliate theft is caused by the fact that is easy to rebuild a hoplink and get credit for your own purchase. All you really need to know is the vendor id.

All you have to do is look at the source code of a typical

How I Cracked The ClickBank Code And Saved Myself $2401!

sales link and you will see the vendor id.

For example:

http://www.clickbank.net/sell.cgi?YourVendorId/1/Product_Description

To rebuild the hoplink you simply use

<http://hop.clickbank.net/?AffiliatesId/YourVendorId>

Now when you click on the hoplink and the original affiliate has lost a sale.

As you can see, without knowing the vendor id, you can not successfully rebuild the hoplink and the affiliates sale would be protected.

Below is an example of how to do this in PHP.

You will need to replace [and] with less then and greater then symbols.

Create a file called order.php

Add the following code

[?php
```

header("Location: http://www.clickbank.net/sell.cgi?YourVendorId/1/Product_Description");
```

exit;
?]
```

Just replace YourVendorID with your Clickbank ID

Replace 1 with your product number

Replace Product_Description with your Product Description

Upload order.php into the same folder as your sales page.

Now link to order.php instead of using the raw order link and your Vendor ID is never exposed

This will make it very hard for affiliates to rob other affiliates of their commissions.

I encourage you to make these simple changes to protect the commissions of your affiliates.
