How The Republicans Stole The 2004 US Election

How The Republicans Stole The 2004 US Election by T.D. Roberts

When I first learned that George W. Bush won the 2004 Presidential election, I was shocked. "How could that be?" I thought. This man is a criminal. How could America have done such a horrific thing? Keep this monster as President? He is a man who has caused an estimated 100 000 deaths in Iraq.

After November 2nd, bits and pieces of the truth started surfacing. As intellectuals started investigating and uncovering the evidence, it became clear that George W. and his regime committed the most heinous crime in American History, stealing the 2004 Presidential election. In one night, they killed democracy in the United States of America.

Now, the world must continue to deal with a right wing fundamentalist regime that is in control of the most powerful and deadly military in the world.

The following is a very brief summary highlighting the evidence that has been accumulated proving that John Kerry never had a chance of becoming President. The Republicans fixed the election so that George W. Bush would win.

The brief facts I have listed have been taken from many important research sites run by people dedicated to uncovering the truth. Following the summary, I have listed sites where I obtained the evidence. Please go to these sites, read what has been uncovered and visit the important links to other research sites.

The world needs to know that George W. Bush never received the majority of electoral votes in 2000 and 2004 to be President. George W. and his crew are dangerous ideologs and complete frauds.

* "Electronic Voting Machines:

A bill was introduced in the House and Senate to outlaw these machines and require a paper printout, but the bill was stalled by the Republican Party, led by House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, and it was not allowed to come to a vote.

How The Republicans Stole The 2004 US Election

Shortly after the November 2nd election, countless stories of problems with the machines began to surface.

Many people tried to vote for Kerry and said that when the final confirmation screen came up, it said they voted for Bush.

Electronic Voting Machines were manufactured mainly by the two companies ESS and Diebold, supporters of the Republican Party. It is the electronic machines that are easy to manipulate and easy to hack. Republican Walden O'Dell is the owner of Diebold and Republican Chuck Hagel is the owner of ESS. Both were openly committed to helping deliver electoral votes to the President.

In the states that had verifiable paper trails for their ballots, the exit polls were virtually the same as the real results. However, in the battleground states where electronic voting machines and/or electronic tabulators were used, the exit polls were mysteriously very different from the final reported totals.

A U of PA professor stated that it is "impossible" that the exit poll results could be as far off as they are.

Unusual results in the areas where computers were used:

In Baker County, Florida, there are 12,887 registered voters, 69.3% of them Democrats and 24.3% of them Republicans. The vote was only 2,180 for Kerry and 7,738 for Bush. In a Democratic stronghold, 5 out of every 7 Democrats voted for Bush???

Very unusual results in Ohio:

In many voting precincts, more votes were cast than the number of people who voted. In Cuyahoga county alone, over 93,000 more votes were recorded than registered voters.

In some precincts, ten times the number of votes were submitted than the number of registered voters. To date, no logical explanation has been given for this. Remember, those 93,000 votes are included in the state totals that give Bush a 136,000 victory in the state, and that is just one county.

In many democratic areas, people waited hours to vote, while Republicans "challenged" voters' rights to vote, forcing them to fill out a provisional ballot instead of a real ballot. The provisional ballots were not counted on election day.

Flyers were sent to democratic areas with an array of false information on them. People were told their voting precinct had changed, that their voter registration was not valid, or that they would go to jail if they tried to vote.

There are many reports of not enough voting machines being placed in heavily democratic and minority areas. Many Kerry supporters had to wait in line 8 hours to vote.

In one precinct in Ohio, over 4,258 votes were given to Bush where there were only 638 registered voters.

In addition to the touch screen machines that produce no paper trail, they are now finding more and more evidence of problems with the "optical scanners" that were used to tabulate the results in many states. In this case, many people did fill out a paper ballot, and these ballots were fed into scanners that totalled the results. These scanners were also manufactured by Diebold and ESS in many cases and are easily hacked.

Many more stories about the black box voting machines, optical scanners, their problems, and the investigation into their tampering are listed on the main page. Blackboxvoting.org is leading the way in the investigation to proving the results were tampered with.

Investigations: Six congressmen have sent a letter to the General Accountability Office and asked for urgent attention and investigation, citing tens of thousands of voting irregularities. Ralph Nader has also begun an investigation into Diebold and ESS, starting with a hand recount of the state of New Hampshire." *

The 6 billion plus people in the world need to realize that the United States of America is no longer a free Country. Those that control it, George W. Bush, Dick Cheney and the rest of the right wing extremists, are incredibly dangerous men with a fascist agenda bent on shaping the world according to their own disturbing neoconserveative beliefs.

Why Democrats Lose Elections: They aren't dumb. They're asleep.

Why Democrats Lose Elections: They aren't dumb. They're asleep. by Kenn Gividen

Give the GOP credit. Unlike the Democrats -- whose collective IQ seems to register somewhere between a '58 Buick and box of rocks -- the Republicans are astutely aware of their political surroundings. That's why they win and Democrats don't.

In reality, the Democrats aren't dumb.

Anyone who was privileged to bask in the presence of former Gov. Joe Kernan know him as a passionate leader who truly cared for Hoosiers. The sharp mind of former Democratic Party State Chair Kip Tew was an asset to the party. And former Lt. Kathy Gov. Davis was bright, witty, and personable. In short, they were a class act.

How The Republicans Stole The 2004 US Election

No, the Democrats aren't dumb. They're asleep.

The GOP, by contrast, paid close attention to the elections in 2003 when Libertarian Greg Dixon took nearly 15 percent of the vote in his bid for Indianapolis City Council. That put a sizeable ding in the confidence of his Republican challenger. More bothersome was the fact that Libertarians proved they could plan and execute an effective campaign. The GOP took note. The Democrats snoozed.

That same year the Libertarians' candidate for mayor in Carmel snatched nearly 25 percent of the vote from the Republican incumbent. That was no small task, considering Hamilton County is a bastion of Republicanism. In nearby Noblesville, the GOP saw over 40 percent of its vote go to Libertarians in two of their City Council races. In Wayne County, Susan Bell flat out squashed her Republican opponent and became the Hoosier state's first Libertarian judge. All told, twelve Libertarians are holding office across the state.

To the ears of Republicans, the above has the ring of an alarm clock. To the Democrats it's a lullaby.

Simply said, the GOP gets it. Indiana has three political parties. They are vulnerable. In 2004 they responded accordingly and won.

The Democrats don't get it. One would think the party of Birch Bayh would have the good sense to exploit the Republicans' soft spot. Exploit it? They don't even seem to know it exists.

Consider, for example, the GOP's gubernatorial primary in May of 2004. Eric Miller, a pro-life, sun-tanned poster child for the religious right, challenged the man who would ultimately become the next governor. The Republican Party was divided. To thinking folks, that translated into vulnerability. To the Democrats -- who are not thinking folks -- it meant nothing.

While Democrats had no chance of snatching Miller's followers, they did have a wide-open opportunity to send them to the Libertarian. It would have taken only 8 percent of Miller's supporters to tilt the election in favor of Democrat Joe Kernan. But the Democrats did nothing. Snore.

The Republicans, meanwhile, did plenty.

For starters, a here-to-fore unknown PAC dumped a ton of cold cash into a direct mail campaign. The target was Joe Kernan. The benefactor was the Libertarian challenger. The result? Kernan lost votes. Those were votes the Republicans would never have captured. Nice play.

What's more, the Republicans kept close tabs on their Libertarian opponent. Stuffing his Web site with e-mail addresses, the GOP received the Libertarian's weekly updates. Any appeal to Miller supporters was noted and challenged. The risk of losing Miller votes was a chance they would not take. Another nice play.

The Democrats, meanwhile, were sound asleep. One Miller supporter went so far as to personally appeal to the Democrats for support. A win by Daniels, he knew, would keep Miller from running in the next election. The election returns proved the Republicans right and the Democrats to be snoozing.

Another case in point was the defeat of Democratic Congressman Baron Hill by Republican Mike Sodrel. The margin of victory was less than 2,000 votes. The Libertarian challenger garnered 4,698 votes. Had the Democrats offered the Libertarian candidate even a modest amount of support, the election would have likely tilted toward the Democrat.

The groggy-eyed Democrats, meanwhile, are outside looking in, clueless as to what happened. But who knows? Maybe between now and 2006 they'll wake up.
