How To Approach Your Noisy Neighbors

By Jason Rickard

It is certainly true that there may be no law that can put your noisy neighbors permanently behind bars, but there is still a way where you can achieve sweet justice. It is always a hassle when you are ready for your daily dose of sleep when all of a sudden your neighbor pumped up the volume of their stereo or are just plain boisterous and rowdy. You may feel that there is not much you can do since it's a free world anyway. But there is a chance of hope to keep things under control if you try to talk and straighten the issue face to face with your neighbors.

The first thing to solve such problem is to confront your neighbors. Most people who are creating this kind of nuisance may have no idea at all that they are being too noisy. Ask them nicely that they are causing you sleepless nights or that you are uncomfortable with their noise. They would probably extend their apologies instantly if you let out your concern in a very civil way.

If you get them to stop making noise on your first try, then you are in luck. However, since it may be in their nature to be noisy, you may find yourself in the same situation again and again. If it happens for a second time, approach them again. First, thank them for the improvement that they may have after the first time you approach them about the issue. Let them know that they may be losing their focus of your concern and that they are back to making a disturbing amount of noise.

It would also be a good idea to ask for their home phone number. You can always give them a ring every time things get out of hand and continue to create too much noise for you to handle. Remember that you should talk to them politely every single time. What do you know, you may even be a help in training them to be good neighbors.

It's true that we do not live in a world where all people are understanding and would empathize with the situation at hand. If the above approach doesn't work, then you can go ahead and make a written complaint about your concern with your landlord or building maintenance department, or in worst-case scenario, bring it to the attention of the police.

How To Get Rid Of Noisy Neighbors

By Jason Rickard

In three religions Judaism, Christianity and Islam, we are asked to respect our neighbors, but what happens when your new neighbor turns out to be the biggest nuisance to arrive in your neighborhood? Parties till late every night, music on full, when your trying to have a nap after a hard days work and unbearable shouting and screaming coming from the house next door. Do you break the rules and turn against your neighbor? Or do you ask your neighbor nicely to quit all the noise they make?

We both can agree on one thing, noisy neighbors are a nuisance. They could turn out to be your worst nightmare and biggest pain if unchallenged. You will have night after night of no sleep. So leaving your noisy neighbors alone is not an option. You have got to become proactive to prevent your health and life from going down the tube, because of someone else.

Your first task as a neighbor with good manners is to simply go over to your noisy neighbor's house and ask politely if they can bring down the level of noise, and explain that they are disturbing the neighborhood. If your neighbor is polite enough they will comply with your request, but if the noise level remains unchanged and or increases, then you have a really irritating neighbor who enjoys doing just that, annoying you and the neighborhood with their ignorance.

If the above didn't work, then you are going to have to call the landlord of your neighbors house and, inform them about the behavior of the current occupants. Your landlord may be hesitant to react, so collecting evidence before hand would be a great idea. Keep your video camera ready in this case, and make sure the time and date is on display. This is to show the landlord at what times your neighbor becomes a noisy nuisance.

If your landlord does not do much but just talk to your neighbors, which is most often the case, then get a letter prepared for evicting your neighbor. This letter works best when signed by many other neighbors in your neighborhood who also can't put up with the disturbance. Send the letter to the landlord and to your troublesome neighbor. This letter has a very strong effect and works almost every time. However if for some reason it doesn't and the disturbance continues, then as a final resort call in the police while the noise coming from your neighbor is at its peak.

Calling the police several times on this troublesome neighbor will solve your problems. They will either be asked to move or, you will notice that you can once again enjoy a good nights sleep.
