How To Buy Inspirational And Motivational Art Posters And Prints

By Willie Jones

Have you ever noticed your reaction to visual stimulation? Sometimes you see a photograph or painting, a sculpture or an object and your attention is immediately riveted!

For whatever reason it communicates to you and it is personal. Not to say that other persons won't get impact from the same visual, but what it sparks exactly is uniquely different from person to person.

We all have our own personal adventures and experiences throughout our lives so when you see that print of a quaint outdoor coffee house, that print may bring you back to that wonderful coffee house in Paris where you took your honeymoon. You may buy it just because it brings back that wonderful pleasure moment.

You've heard before that when you look at a painting or sculpture that you try to see what the artist was trying to communicate, but from the viewpoint of a consumer, it's not about what the artist sees, it's about what it communicates to you and believe me, you can have two people looking at the same thing and their viewpoints will be different. Heck, some people buy a picture because it has the right colors in it that match their furniture! Nothing wrong with that!

Buy a print because you truly love it! Whether you purchase an original painting, print or poster, it is the one that you love you will probably keep for life and pass down in time to your children.

Throughout your life your décor will change many times, color schemes will change many times, but your art will still be with you.

When you walk into someone's home you get an overall feel for the people that live there and if you are left alone for a few minutes with no one to talk to because they are off to make you coffee, chances are that your eyes will wander all around the room and a good piece of art will grab your attention. Even family photographs are looked at.

A great piece of art is the focal point in a room and your décor can be built around that. If all you know is a piece of art you love but have no design skills, then fear not. There is help there too. If you cannot afford a designer's help then you can start by looking in furniture stores and seeing how rooms are put together, or you can look at model homes to get ideas.

Surround yourself with beautiful art. After all, art is universal!

Enjoy!

Motivational Posters, Not Just For The Office Anymore

By Willie Jones

It's not uncommon to see motivational posters hanging up in offices, usually in reception, boardrooms or areas where most employees can view them. They can be beautiful, funny, patriotic but always inspirational. But is it just for the office?

Your home is certainly a great place to have these prints.

With the hectic lives of modern day society we can easily overlook the simple things and get lost in the endless number of things we need to do in a day. Sometimes we need a reminder to keep us motivated to do the things we do.

You may be a parent with rambunctious children. Parenting can be rough but also has great rewards. There is a wonderful motivational print of a mother and father with two children looking at a mountain. The print is called "Direction–Family which states; There are two important things we can give our children, one is roots the other is wings".

Another great motivational poster called Purpose–Boy ( ) in regards to children which states; A century form now it will not matter what kind of car I drove, what kind of house I lived in, or how much money I had in the bank...but 100 years from now the world may be a better place, because I was important in the life of a child".

Beautiful works of art like these not only accent your walls but also sends a message and is a powerful reminder to motivate us.

Inspirational prints are not a new idea. Hundreds of years ago women would needle point messages with pictures, sometimes religious, sometimes a family crest with a motto. You may have in your possession right now something grandma needlepointed that has been past down to you which you will pass down to your children.

Motivational posters are a great way to accent your home or office and also make a great gift for a house warming party or to send a special message to someone.

Enjoy!
