How To Find Quality Article Directories!

By: Martin Lemieux

You've done your homework and you want to promote articles online, but where do you submit your articles to? How do you find these ezine article directories people are talking about?

Over the years, I've been able to amass a large list of article directories. Unfortunately, my list may not be the right type of list for your business. See, my detailed list includes websites that relate to the internet marketing & web development industry. Don't worry, there are many ways to collect a comprehensive list of article directories that relate to your business.

You Want To Create Two Different Types:

1) "Real Time" Submission Directories:

These article directories are the easiest to submit to. They usually have a simple contact form somewhere located within their website which you can easily copy & paste your article in. These article directories DO NOT require that you log into an author account that you register for.

2) "Author Account" Article Directories:

These types of directories are ever growing in popularity. I recommend that you utilize a Microsoft Excel Spreadsheet in order to build this style of article directory list. I mention this simply because you will be required to login to an author account with a username & password. Isn't it much easier to use the same user name & password for all of them? Yes, but I wouldn't recommend it. If you want to keep it simple, try using 2-3 different passwords that are easy to remember.

Now that we have gone through the two types of article directory lists you'll need to create, we can now go and find article directories. I never go too far searching all over the place online, people have done the work for you!!!

All you need to do is find other people's great article directory lists! Once you've amassed a huge list, you can then spend some time once a month searching for new article directories that relate to your business. But for now, let's take a look at other people's great lists!!!

THERE YOU GO!

In the future, the way to find these major lists is by searching for something like "Article Directory List(s)". Usually this type of search will deliver the kind of results you're looking for.

When you think you have the "typical article directory list" which many authors have, it's now time to dig a little deeper and search for article directories that relate to the topics you write about. Here's how we do this...

In google, search for these terms:

I will use (Topic) to signify your own related topic or industry. Simply replace "topic" with your own topic instead.

- (Topic) Article Directory
- (Topic) Article Directories
- Submit (Topic) Articles
- (Topic) Article Submission
- (Topic) Related Article

You will need to dig a little by using these searches but sometimes, you might come across some directories that most authors don't know about. Overtime, this is how you'll be able to create a massive list of ezine article directories that relate to your business!

Happy Hunting!

Article Directory, Anyone?

By Gina Capatar

Yes, it's the hype of the century; everywhere you turn you'll see and hear of article directories sprouting like mushrooms. There's practically a new article directory site being introduced in the World Wide Web almost every second.

It is probably because of the usefulness of these kinds of sites to the general public, to the webmaster and to people/products needing exposure. An article directory has it all!

Talk about having free resource on almost any topic imaginable. Article directories hoard articles ranging from DIY's, Xbox launches, inspirational quotes, love and relationships advice, beauty tips, iPod's latest, personality quizzes, legal guidance, resource on divorce, gay and lesbian concerns and even on the extremes, issues concerning terrorism. It's like having a wiki of what everyone knows and thinks of.

The usefulness of article directories to the general public is outdone by its worth to a marketer. An article directory is a free and an inexpensive way for an internet marketer to promote his/her product or service by just writing helpful and useful articles and making use of the resource box to promote his/her goods. It can be done by any marketer in just a matter of hours or minutes for some. You don't have to be a whiz at writing, all you have to do is share what you know and that'll be effective enough. A word of caution though, don't waste your time writing Press Releases because your chance of reprint is 0–0.1%. Article directories don't like them and worst, readers of articles hate them.

What about the value of article directories to the people who own them, a.k.a the webmasters? Why are webmasters opting to shift from their usual projects to create an article directory? Simple! Article directories exemplify the best kind of website that Search Engines love the most. Article directories are teeming with fresh content everyday, and they are constantly updated. Not to mention, the keywords crammed into each article are simply divine especially when you are affiliated with Google AdSense. There is no other kind of website that can par with having an article directory.

I have seen and watched the ever increasing popularity of article directories; there was a time when there were just about 20 or 30 article directories found on the internet. Before, only a few took the time to diligently pursue the creation of these directories and only a few were brave enough to pay for hosting and domain services just to become repositories of what people have written about. They were among the first to recognize the benefits and advantages of having an article directory.

Among the first article directories were:

Ezinearticles.com iSnare.com GoArticles.com ArticleCity.com

By now, most likely, they are handling hundreds or thousands of articles submitted everyday and reaping the rewards of being the firsts in the most promising field of article directories.

With all these and probably more, I'll say, "Article Directories, anyone?"
