How To Make A Successful Car Accident Claim

By Mumtaz Shah

A car accident is never the same, similar but never the same. So logically a car accident claim can never be the same. Accidents do on the other hand occur in the millions every year, however making a successful compensation claim is difficult to get right if you don't make the right moves.

All Car Accidents Are Unique

There's one thing you need to beware of and that is accident 'management' companies either attending the scene or hospital. These are salespeople who work on a commission basis. You always have the good and the bad ones. Your job would be to distinguish the good from the bad.

99% of the time, these people will want your injury claim. Even if it means by-passing the small print! Another thing to note is, never listen to previous case success stories. What happened in the last case can't be guaranteed in your case. So don't fall for the money, settlement time or success stories.

Tips To Make A Successful Car Accident Claim

Car accident injury claims are major players in the 'personal injury litigation' market. They are straightforward as liability is admitted and vital information is exchanged at the scene. Information such as driver and insurance details, where the accident took place, when and how. If the police attend the scene, both parties will be given a producer, which states that the accident did occur. Further from there it will be logged on the national database for any inquires.

Now For The Secrets...

A 'quality' accident solicitor will explain the procedures in 'full' and then ask if you have any questions. Don't ever say NO! You could be falling into a trap.

Do ask these important questions such as...

How To Make A Successful Car Accident Claim

· Will I get the 'whole' of my compensation? If yes... continue · Will I need to pay a fee? If no... continue · Do you recover costs from the other side (i.e. people at fault)? If yes... continue · Would I need to pay anyone any money once my claim is settled? If no... proceed.

Passengers In A Car Accident

Passengers are innocent victims in a vehicle and can be from either, the fault or non-fault side. Passengers are not in-charge of the vehicle at hand. Therefore they can always make a successful compensation claim provided they have been to a hospital or visited a doctor.

A passenger can be in the form of, a husband, wife, child, cousin or a friend, at fault or not, they are entitled to claim compensation. They can make a claim against the people who have hit them whilst in the car.

Liability acceptance for an accident can cause confusion in itself. Do you think it was your fault?

Either way, you can still make a successful claim!

If on the other hand you are the driver and it is your fault, then you won't have any success of making a claim, however, the passengers will.

Payment Factors

There are circumstances where compensation payments are reduced for a number of reasons. The most common ones are for not wearing a seat belt, which marginally reduces the payment by 25%. Another major factor is for drink driving. If a passenger knowingly knew the driver was unfit to drive due to excess intoxication, a reduction will be made accordingly.

There are cases where the driver admits part liability on a proportion basis. Generally it's 50/50, but it needs to be assessed by an investigator who will examine who's at fault before concluding. There are even some cases that result to 80/20.

Decision Dilemmas

You DO NOT need to hold back thinking it was your friend's or family's car. They pay insurance premiums every year to ensure if anything happens, they're covered and so are their passengers. You also need NOT WORRY if you were in a taxi, bus, train or any other form of public transport. You can still proceed with an accident compensation claim, as the drivers are insured, as is the taxi, train and bus driver. Companies pay thousands every year in insurance premiums to cover passengers for these unfortunate accidents and injuries.

On speaking to a quality car accident solicitor will you be able to eliminate doubts in your head about payments, fees and procedures!

When Should You Instruct A Car Accident Lawyer

By Daniel Richards

If you want to file for a claim through a car accident lawyer, you must, of course, be involved in a car accident and have experienced some injuries. You don't really need to be a driver in order to file a car accident claim. You can be the driver, a cyclist, a pedestrian or a passenger and also those who have been injured due to negligence and recklessness caused by the person operating the car. If you have been hit by a car on the road, you must get a car accident lawyer because they specialize in car cases solely.

Of course the main criteria for filing for a claim is your involvement in a car accident. Injuries will add to the claim that you have filed. If you have been bruised and bumped, you may use that as strong evidence that you have been in a car accident. If you experienced injuries, you must take pictures of them so that the lawyer can present it as proof any injuries you sustained as a result of the accident.

If you have experienced more than bruises and scratches, like losing a leg or a part of your body, then you need to instruct your lawyer and make sure that you find the best lawyer in town because your case is not easy to handle. You will require hospitalization and you cannot make a claim with that kind of situation. You will need an accident lawyer to prepare all the information and details needed to present to the court.

The car accident lawyer will be responsible for the investigation and gathering of all documents you need in order to get your compensation. Some people who have been in an accident do not consult lawyers because they think that they will just hinder their case. However, it is in the lawyers interest for you to win the case so they will be working hard on your behalf.

A car accident lawyer is necessary for serious incidents in order to find out who was at fault in the accident by studying the case carefully and applying all the rules and regulations for car accidents and driving.

In consulting a lawyer, you need to be fast so the responses will be fast. It is necessary to consult a lawyer after the incident has just happened. You will have a limited time to prepare.

If you know that you are not the one at fault, don't think twice about consulting your lawyer. He knows better how to handle and deal with the issues properly and accurately. Of course, if you are not the one at fault, the lawyer must use any strategy he can to prove your innocence.

Don't hesitate to call your car accident lawyer if anything goes wrong. This will lessen your burden in getting the claim that is rightfully yours.
