How to get listed in Google Quickly

Everyone wants number one in Google. Well before you can be number one you first gotta get in. Going to the "add url" page is no guarantee. Because as we all know it can go weeks before Google (which is the biggest search engine, with more than 200 million searches per day) will index your page.

While your site is not listed in Google you are loosing big time compared to you competition that already have their site listed and receives a good amount of traffic. Of course there are also other factors that comes to play when indexing your page and trying to get a good rank.

In order to get indexed fast you will need to have at least one link to your site from another site that is already listed in Google. You can do this by posting to highly ranked forums and discussion boards and start writing short articles. As most forum and discussion boards allow for users to ad their signature at the end of the post.

The more forums and discussion boards you participate in the bigger the chance for a higher rank is, remember that the more pages linking back to your site helps get a better position in the search engines.

You can also do this by requesting links from sites that are already ranked by Google. If you write to the webmaster of Yahoo-Business.com and put links in the subject line, and if your site qualifies you will get a link to your site. ### Do You Submit Your Website To All The Search Engines?

By Jeremy Gossman

There is really only one search engine to worry about submitting too and that is Google and you should only submit one page your main once and maybe a sitemap a week later but never more than once a week. If you have a link coming to your new site from a site that is currently listed in Google then Google will find you quicker.

Most importantly search engines that have any bearing will find you if Google has you listed. Not that there are not any other worth while search engines. There are just many that look to Google. If you have a non comercial website you will want to look into DMOZ for a seperate submission.

So don't pay for directory submission many directories will bring you no traffic at all.

Here is the #1 tip to getting into Google. Get people to link to your site. In particular links from site that are in Google already.

Important Note: The more links that you have going out from your site will effect your page rank with Google negatively. The more links coming in will help your page rank. If you have the highest page rank for a particular key word you win.
