There is one surefire way to keep your children earning the best grades and that is to get a private tutor. Most kids find themselves struggling in at least one subject but with the help of a private tutor your son or daughter can get all of the help they need to get their grades back up. If you have seen a decline in your child's report cards or if you have noticed that your child is just not progressing as you feel he or she should, then you need to start thinking about getting a tutor today.

There are a few of different kinds of private tutoring available to you and your child. Some of these people will come to your home for each of the sessions while others will have you go to them. And then you can choose to work with a tutor who works for a larger company or a university student who is looking to pick up a few extra bucks.

The fact of the matter is that all of the options that are open to you are good ones. Here are the pros and cons of each private tutoring option:

Tutor working for a company

PROS: These types of tutoring companies generally pride themselves on the abilities of their tutors. They are good at what they do and consistent which can make all of the difference.

CONS: These types of private tutors can be more costly and they will not come to your home, which makes them a little less convenient.

University student

PROS: Smart people who are usually pretty good at relating to children. They are still in school and are used to flexing the academic muscles. They can also be cheaper than some of the other options. Most of these types of private tutors will come to your house, which saves you, time and gas money.

CONS: The quality of these types of tutors can be more variable than from a company or service.

Knowing where to start when looking to hire a private tutor is probably the hardest part of the entire process. The best place to start looking for a good tutor is with your friends. Ask those that you know if they have ever hired a tutor. If they have then ask what they thought of this person, was he or she good at what they did, did they get along with the kid well? Were there any problems at all? Try to find out as much as you can, as everything will help you to make the right decisions concerning the tutoring of your children.

If you are going to choose a company for the private tutoring sessions then look them up online. Check out some client reviews to see how they rate with people like you, parents who are actually using them. And if you are thinking of choosing an unaffiliated private tutor then make sure that you get some references. Get at least five of them and call them. I know so many people that get the references but don't make the calls! It is so important, you are looking at spending a good amount of money and after all this is for your children's education. Choosing the right private tutor matters, so choose carefully and wisely.

Homeschool And Grade Your Child

By James Masterson

How great must a parent feel spending time with her child at home, see her grow, discover and explore the world! Be all the way with her during her learning and explorations.

In America, homeschooling has been gaining popularity due to several reasons given by parents or they have seen the applicability to their child's unique situation. But, laws pertaining to this new alternative approach to education vary from state to state and there are different interpretations to it by school districts.

Homeschooling does not mean bringing school to home because it will defeat the purpose of homeschooling which is to enjoy learning and have more time to socialize outside rather than spend the day at school and at night they bury themselves in their homework.

Often, this choice of educational approach is decided by the family due to certain unique situations like special children in the family. Others just simply want to be a hands-on parent to his or her kids' learning and explorations.

In engaging to homeschooling, there are certain things you need to sacrifice like your time and finances. It will be taxing and would take too much of your time as a mother. No more pilates or yoga class for the moms or even office outside the home. For the breadwinners, it will be financially constraining because homeschooling is very expensive.

But try to weigh the benefits from the disadvantage of homeschooling your child:

- The curriculum programs offered most often are very open and flexible.
- The best teacher you can give your children: you.
- Parents are active partners in the children's learning activities
- Parents as role models being reinforced as they work closely together with their kids, and,
- How learning can be fun!

If you as a family are really decided on homeschooling your child, you have to go through the process of reviewing the options available for you considering you have a special case, check out your child's learning styles so you have to spend time with him and be flexible.

How about grades? Grading your child's performance is very important especially if the state inspects you. Grades of your homeschooled child should be filed neatly and be well-organized.

Grades should be your concrete measure about your child's performance. It will tell you much about what your child or how much he has mastered though this might be overwhelming work especially paperwork to be checked. Also, you cannot give scores to an effort like grades do. They put numbers to almost anything.

If your family is ready, has studied all other options and all are positive, then you can experience that learning is fun!

It doesn't matter if you just want to explore home schooling possibilities or have made the decision and are looking for a guide to point you in the right direction, "The Parents Guide to Home Schooling" will provide you with the information you require.
