Ideal Golf Resorts Breakaway

By Dana Goldberg

If you are thinking of a place where you can spend your next golf retreat, here are some golf resorts that rank among the best places to go golfing.

Consider visiting Hawaii's golf resorts. The six islands seem as though it were created with golfers in mind. Hawaii is perfectly suited to the only season that matters to avid golfers, the golf season. And in Hawaii, this means all year round. No wonder, many golfers and top golf course architects journey here to experience the finest that golf resorts can offer. Maui, Oahu and Kauai Island are sites of a number of dreamlike golf resort paradise.

The island of Maui is home to some of the most impressive golf resorts. Here, they often offer sweeping views of Maui's coastline and the neighboring islands of Lanai and Molokai. In winter however, humpback whales are seen to be swimming along the coasts presenting Hawaiian golfers another amazing site to add to the greens. Golf destinations here are truly a golfer's paradise often offering spectacular scenic views of mountains and oceans, hilly golf courses and sloping terrains. On the other hand, it is often hard to book for tee time in Hawaiian resorts which, even is oftentimes more expensive, can not seem to accommodate all the golfers that would want to spend time on its greens.

Southern California, another site that ranks high on the list, is home to many of the world's historic golf events. California golf resorts are some of the world's best making them ideal sites for many International tournaments. The combination of beauty and elegance make golf resorts fit for personal and business pleasure. Double Tree Golf Resort, Mt. Woodson, Pala Mesa Golf Resorts are only three of the most celebrated golf resorts in this state. From lakeside golf resorts to mountain-situated course, California can truly be a remarkable place to spend your golf vacation.

Michigan prides itself for being reputed as America's summer golf capital. Majority of its 1000 golf resorts and courses have first-rate service, placing Michigan rank 12 in Golf Digest's best golf destinations in the world. From the top 75 best golf courses in America, 4 can be found here. Get hooked in breathtaking vistas, blue waters and lush fairways that will definitely leave golfers on vacation anxious to play all through their stay.

Golf 'til you drop in Florida. There are more golf courses and golf resorts in Florida than you can imagine, plus there are golf resorts complete with golf facilities like pro-golf shops, driving ranges, golf putting greens, bars and restaurants.

Florida has hosted many golf tournaments over the years, some of which are international PGA Tours and LPGA Tours. Golf here is surely outstanding, with excellent accommodations and best places to dine and stay absolutely everything that a golfer would want to do with.

The World's golfing capital, Myrtle Beach is also home to first-rate golf resorts. You can never find another place for such a dense number of golf courses in the world, including off course the many golf resorts that can be found around the place. But then again, however one looks at it, real golfing can only be done in the terrains of Ireland. Nothing beats the place when it comes to real excitement, rugged challenges, excellent vistas and golfing amenities.
