International Travel Insurance - Don't Leave Home Without It

By Jim Grayson

Does this sound familiar? You've saved and saved for that perfect vacation you've always dreamt about. You're in the travel agent's office, you've just purchased your very expensive ticket and she's saying that you should buy some international travel insurance too. You roll your eyes because you're sure all this international travel insurance business is nonsense and she's just trying to get some more of your money. You say no thanks. While on your vacation, you crash your car and get hurt. Guess what? You've got to foot all the expenses yourself and because you didn't want to get international travel insurance.

For those of you who aren't familiar with it, international travel insurance is a must have if you intend to travel out of your own country. Since you're not familiar, right about now you're probably asking what international travel insurance is. Simply put, it is a temporary insurance policy which you buy before you leave on your trip. Typically, coverage lasts the full duration of your trip but, depending on who you're insured with, your international travel insurance can be extended for up to 12 months.

A lot of people couldn't be bothered with the added expense but there is always the small possibility that something can happen. A good international travel insurance policy will provide three things: good coverage at a reasonable price, readily available emergency assistance and efficient claims processing. It should also cover most circumstances. Your international travel insurance isn't adequate if it doesn't cover medical expenses, medical evacuation, travel cancellation and deferment costs, loss of luggage, rental vehicle expenses, death expenses, personal liability and legal expenses.

There is most often a need for international travel health insurance, to cover medical expenses. This can include hospital stays, medication and doctor's fees. However, international travel health insurance is a godsend in more critical situations as it also covers ambulance services and emergency-related travel expenses, which is especially important in third world countries where supplies are limited and you may need to be transported to another country.

While you may not think that the cost of such international travel health insurance coverage is justified for a short, weekend trip, if you're going to be hiking through malaria infested forests over those two days, you might want to think again. Use your discretion. It's much better to be prepared for a possible emergency than to fall ill or get injured and not have any international travel health insurance coverage.

Guide To Cheap Annual Travel Insurance

By Stanley Emerson

Vacations are for fun, it means leaving behind your job and responsibilities for a while. Having travel insurance is one way of putting your mind at complete rest. It's a lot easier to enjoy your trip if you know that you are covered from luggage lost to sickness.

The further your trip will be, the more you will need travel insurance. This is common sense, as international trips are costly, so there's a need to protect your hard earned travel money. So wherever you go, to a local or international destination, it's very important that you have the necessary insurance coverage. Cheap annual travel insurance is an alternative choice for those budget-conscious travelers who are making more than one trip a year. The main feature of the annual travel insurance against regular travel insurance is that it saves you money. For a once annual payment, you become covered whenever you travel during the year. The terms and conditions vary between companies, but annual insurance for unlimited travel is also available. Cheap annual travel insurance provides substantial cost savings than any regular type of travel insurance.

Here are some tips for choosing your best cheap annual travel insurance:

1. Sign up with a reputable insurance company that has worldwide offices which can easily be contacted during emergency needs.
2. The insurance company should have a 24/7 customer assistance which is an essential for international travelers.
3. Always make your office's 1-800 number available to you when you are abroad.

4. The cost of the insurance should not be more than 10% of your investment.
5. Read the terms and conditions of the policy to make sure you aren't buying unnecessary or inadequate coverage.
6. Look for refundable policy, especially if you have the history of changing your mind too often.
7. A good insurance should cover at least the following:
 - a. Flight cancellation or delay
 - b. Luggage loss and delay
 - c. Sickness and accident during the trip.
 - d. Evacuation support during an emergency situation such as natural calamities

Cheap annual travel insurance is good for you if you take vacations more than once a year. Instead of taking several insurance each time you travel, you can make use of a single travel insurance that could save you a lot of money and time. On the other hand, if you travel less often, an annual insurance policy is not for you since you will not be able to recover the cost.
