Keeping in touch with International long distance

By Raymond Klese

Keeping in touch with International long distance by Raymond Klese

Whether you have a family member, clients, customers or mlm team members overseas you soon learn the true meaning looong distance. The world is a big place and the distance between you and your contact in a far away land translates into a substantial sum on your monthly telephone bill. If you are making those calls using your regular long distance carrier, it would not be unusual to pay as much as $200 for a one-hour phone call. I hope to show you a better way to make those calls while saving as much as 93% of your normal long distance phone bill.

You can, perhaps, get better rates using an international calling plan of some sort. But if you are interested in getting substantial savings then you need to look into voice over IP (VoIP).

The promises of VoIP have finally come to reality. What got off to a rocky start several years ago has now matured into a sophisticated telephone alternative that will rival traditional telephone services for years to come. Voice over IP allows you to place calls to any part of the planet using the Internet. When combined with a high-speed Internet access, DSL or cable/satellite connection, the results are clear, reliable telephone calls at a fraction of the cost.

Using VoIP for your long distance calling, whether within the United States or overseas, you will be able to keep your costs down while building your business. The best part is that you will be able to keep in contact more often, spend more quality time on the line and pay less – perhaps much less – then you are paying today.

By way of example, I regularly place calls between the United States and Indonesia. In the past these calls would average about $50. Using VoIP the calls are now averaging less than $4.

Global Value Connect offers many VoIP products and services for you to choose from (<http://www.globalvalueconnect.com/VoIP.htm>). One of our best sellers is Packet8. They offer both residentail and business calling plans and have just recently announced a new product offering called Packet8 Virtual Office. This product is specifically aimed at Small and Medium Enterprises (SME) by providing an affordable, easy-to-use VoIP based alternative to traditional PBX systems or Centrex class services from legacy telecommunications providers. In response to a growing demand from retailers serving the small-to-medium business (SMB) market, 8x8 has created a special, all inclusive Virtual Office retail package, enabling customers to acquire and self-install a powerful, off the shelf business phone system at significant cost savings.

Keeping in touch with your overseas family and contacts has been easier and has never been cheaper. Give it a try and start saving money today.
