Living On A Cruise Ship Is Catching On

By J Schipper

Well, living on a Cruise Ship is catching on.

Quite a few couples are now subscribing to world cruises and it is affecting the Cruise Ship industry.

In 2006 the Holland America Line is experiencing a 20 percent increase in the number of cruises longer than 12 days.

For 2007, the demand for world cruises for Cunard is so great the company is having two world cruises, including the Queen Mary 2's first voyage around the world, an 80-day journey. Silversea Cruises, a very, very exclusive Cruise Line has just launched a series of voyages of 34 to 123 days and is having its first around-the-world cruise in 2007.

And Crystal Cruises Inc. spokeswoman Mimi Weisband said that they saw a record number of bookings for this year's 106-day world cruise.

Why is this happening? Nobody likes flying anymore. It is not relaxing, you are stuffed like sardines in a tin can, you have to bring your own lunch, and have to take off your shoes.

Now think about cruising. You've got your house with you, wherever you go, just like a turtle. You get taken care of, whatever you need. Medical Care is close by, so are 10 bars and 4 restaurants open 24 hours a day in most cases.

You don't have to pack and unpack every day as with regular vacations, you can spend leisurely days playing pingpong and shuffleboard and relaxing with longtime friends. The key selling theme for these long cruises is COMFORT.

You can see and do exotic things from 10 AM to 12 PM, go for lunch, and do more exotic things from 2 PM till 7 PM and then have a 10 course supper. After supper there is a free show every night.

Perfect life Rather than sitting in a summer cottage staring at the walls, on a cruise you have your social life built in, with 2000 possible friends.

Cruise lines say another key attraction is that now you can visit plenty of far-flung destinations – such as Hawaii and Tahiti– without dealing with airport security and other hassles. The funny thing is that these Cruises are no longer exclusively populated by retired Seniors, but are becoming populated by entrepreneurial 40– and 50–people, who can turn the ship into a virtual, floating office.

You can successfully run a business from being on a ship, because of Wireless Internet Access worldwide available on these Cruise Ships.

Destinations are also being changed by the Cruise Ship industry; more and more exotic itineraries are being visited, because people like change, and if you have never seen the Pyramids, now is your chance on a 12 day Cruise.

The costs of a world cruise are no longer prohibitive, in 2005 a 100 day cruise could be had for $16,000 per person, that is $160 a day for travel, food, guided tours, shows and companionship.

Some people do this in their 30's, saying that they want to enjoy this while they can. Others do this after they get a divorce, as a consolation prize to themselves.

As the demand for World Cruises increases, at some point in time entrepreneurs are going to buy a Cruise Ship at a reasonable price and are going to turn it into Condominiums.

Guess who will buy one of the first ones. J Schipper is interested in Cruise Ships

What Type Of Alaskan Cruise Will You Enjoy?

By Sarah K. Jenkins

Alaska is nothing short of a majestic wilderness that is one of the very last frontiers left in the world. Here, you will see all that is natural with the beautiful peaks of mountains to the crystal waters of the ocean. You will also see some of the most amazing wildlife, perhaps even migrating if you travel during the summer months. Of course, there are the Alaskan communities to stop in and see with their quaint towns and local culture. If you will be traveling on an Alaskan cruise, you have several options to take into consideration.

·Consider Inside Passage Cruises. For about a week long, these cruises will take you out and back in to the same port. They allow for some of the most beautiful choices. You will find them leaving from locations such as Vancouver as well as from Seattle.

·The Gulf Cruise. Another option offers a one way cruise to Anchorage. This cruise will take you up close to glaciers as well as mountains and allows you some of the most amazing picturesque views.

·The Small Ship. Another type of Alaskan cruise is a small ship cruise. These allow you to travel into some of the more remote locations with a smaller ship. You will see glaciers, whales and even bears. The wilderness lover will truly enjoy this type of cruise.

There are plenty of cruise lines that offer cruises of each of these. You are going to find one that offers just what you are interested in, of course. It is always best to plan your Alaskan cruise as soon as possible as some of the cruises will fill up quickly, keeping space limited. Remember that Alaskan cruises only span from May to September and in that short time there is much to see and do.
