What To Expect In A Luxury Hotel

By Steve Vaile

Every traveler has a different expectation when it comes to hotels. One of the joys of traveling is the pure adventure of the trip, so you may need to keep an open mind when it comes to the quality of the lodgings, especially when it comes to international travel. When it comes to a luxury hotel, there may be a great deal of difference between the quality of the lodgings and the amenities available. Different hotels elicit different expectations, so the best way to determine what you should expect at any hotel—especially a luxury hotel—is to evaluate the rating system as set forth by a travel service, such as the American Automobile Association, AAA.

When it comes to review potential hotels for your lodging, consider looking at a luxury hotel that have been rated using the American Automobile Association scale from one diamond to five diamonds. The AAA diamond scale is by far the most well recognized in the United States, but this scale is not generally used for rating international hotels. Also, these ratings are only of the AAA-approved properties that encompass many lodging options, but may be absent a specific hotel. The ultra exclusive rating of five diamonds is only awarded to the greatest luxury hotel and individuals should expect these properties be the best possible for that specific city or state.

If you are interested in traveling or want to enjoy a special night or weekend with a loved one, look for a luxury hotel for all your lodging concerns. Generally speaking, luxury hotels come with a hefty price tag, but are well worth every penny due to extravagant furnishings and superb amenities. The title of luxury hotel comes with several general expectations, although all expectations may not necessarily apply to all rooms or facilities in a luxury hotel.

Generally speaking, individuals choose to stay at luxury hotels due to the extras. Whereas a typical hotel offers the basics: shelter, bed, and running water, a luxury hotel will take the basics to the next step. Instead of just a bed, a luxury hotel will have inviting quarters with comfortable mattresses, high thread count sheet sets, and a fantastic array of pillows. Some hotels are even offering their mattresses, duvets, sheets, and pillows for sale for guests who want to bring a bit of luxury into their own homes.

A luxury hotel is often equipped with luxurious bathrooms, usually including a separate shower and either a soaking tub or a Jacuzzi. Also, a luxury hotel will have oversized, fluffy towels of a spa quality, along with a thick robe for use within the room or suite. Furthermore, most luxury hotels will have a pair of slippers for the guest to use and take home with them. As for the soaps and toiletries, luxury hotels will have a high quality product, generally from a spa or other quality maker.

A luxury hotel will have in-room bars packed with a variety of items, ranging from gourmet cookies and candies to top shelf liquors. Also, a luxury hotel have an array of complementary items that are provided to the guests.
