Maremma : Accomodation For Your Holiday In Satuturnia, Terme Di Saturnia, Pitigliano, Capalbio And Sovana In Maremma

By Giulio Detti

Crystal clear waters and wild horses, intimate inlets and "macchia mediterranea", the fragrances and flavours of a land that leaves its mark.

A journey into Maremma – and journey is the correct term – is an all-round, complete experience, it stimulates you and leaves an indelible sign. The nature is absolute, it enriches and changes your way of thinking.

Tuscany is just this. It is a mine of worlds into their own. They can only be confused on the surface.

Telling the difference between them requires the smallest effort, understanding the differences and discovering the peculiarities leads to great pleasure. Yes, even in Italy, even here in Tuscany, there still exist untouched lands and Maremma is one of these. Maremma is a place of great renown, which we usually know a great deal about.

Its story is linked to evocative tales and images: the shining sea and golden sands, lagoons with flocks of birds sweeping up into the air, sweet hills and wild areas, incredibly dense pine woods and herds of oxen looked after by the butteri, shrouded in a rough canvas of myth.

Once a cursed land infested by malaria, the marsh is today pure beauty, a wild splendour that marks the soul with surprising wild animals such as the majestic cows or Maremman horses selected for this land.

The coast is covered by the intense green of a thick and luminous pine wood which acts as a barrier to the sunny countryside.

And then, of course, there is also an explosion of small ancient towns, fashionable places, VIP ports, élite international tourist destinations, full of life, seafood specialities and famous wines.

Destinations that are craved and longed for for many months by those who are looking for refreshment from a constant daily trudging in the memory of the unique moments lived here.

And there are some unforgettable corners, and emotions to put aside for when they are needed.

Famous and enchanting places, some with ample stretches of public beaches, others that are more exclusive and that have been much more. They were Etruscan or Roman ports, property of the Sienese and then the Spanish who fortified the coast. If you go out into the sea the coastline will reveal all its unique charm.

And how can we forget the pearls that we meet when we leave the beaches.

You can go from the hustle and bustle of the coast to the silent attention of the villages scattered on the hills and still surrounded by walls. You can discover places marked by the past that are certainly less famous, but that you will definitely never forget. You just need to be curious and go off the beaten track, travel those extra few miles, it won't be a waste of time. Click to enlarge Quite the opposite.

Time will wait for you to discover the treasures of fascinating architecture, medieval piazzas, forts and very often views opening up over the hills beneath you. If it tickles your fancy, you can stimulate your palate with boar and acquacotta (a vegetable soup with tomato and egg). You can also press on further to an even earlier past by visiting the eternal towns of the Etruscan peoples who, when the sad time comes to say goodbye, will have left signs of their happiness, joy and wisdom.

Holiday In Maremma Traveling Through Pitigliano, Capalbio, And Saturnia

By Gabriel Adams

The Maremma is a wonderful getaway if you are looking for fun and romance. Not only does the region show a glimpse of ancient civilizations and a beautiful natural landscape, but it also boasts wonderful wine and culinary masterpieces. The Maremma is filled with a very close knit group of people which make visitors feel like they are at home. When visiting the Maremma, you definitely want to visit the towns of Pitigliano, Capalbio, and Saturnia.

Pitigliano is characterized by tuff stone and volcanic magma, as well as crystal clear water and beautiful beaches. The history of this town is very apparent by the many different museums and attractions located here. The magnificent Orsini Castle is located at the entrance of Pitigliano, and the aqueduct that supplied the town with water is located next to it. At the edge of town there is a medieval gate called the Porta di Sovana. After passing through this gate you can see the remains of the Etruscan city wall. Throughout the area of Pitigliano are ancient paths with walls more than 10 meters high. These paths were dug into the rock by the Etruscans.

The next city to visit is Capalbio. This village is well known in the Italian gossip newspapers, because it is often visited by many famous people. Although it has become a major tourist destination, it still retains its ancient charm and beauty. Like most of the cities in the Maremma, Capalbio has many historical places to visit. Capalbio has a wonderful walled village from the medieval era that is still almost completely intact. The area around Capalbio is a great place to take a bike ride. The landscape is very beautifully dotted with olive groves and fields of flowers.

The final city on the tour of the Maremma is Saturnia. Saturnia is most well known for the Terme di Saturnia, which is a spa that boasts the healing effects of natural sulfur spring water. These natural hot springs are set into the walls of the town, and offer a relaxing feel and a breath-taking view of the surrounding area. Saturnia is a great place to visit and relax, as well as have fun dancing, and eating wonderful food. Saturnia has very nice people and is a wonderful place for tourists to see the ancient civilization of this area, as well as enjoy a nice relaxing time in the natural springs.
