

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

Men and Their Little Friends

By D. Gustafson

Men and Their Little Friends by D. Gustafson

I've never been able to quite get a grip on a man's attitude towards his penis. Look it's a body part. We all have body parts. But somehow, somehow, the male penis has evolved to such an extent; it has developed its own personality, hell, its own life. If I'm lyin', I'm dyin'.

Go ahead, ask a man. I guarantee you; he's named the damned thing.

Now let me tell you, they're not ordinary names, no sir. This small, goofy looking piece of flesh, sitting in front of two overly sensitive orbs, always, and I do mean always, merits some sort of large or action packed name - "Big Jim and the Twins" or "Pumpin' Pile Driver o' Passion".

Yep, they're talking about that thing that retreats at the merest suggestion of cold water, and the twins? They're hydrophobic. No doubt about it, none at all. They don't merely retreat, they flat out run away. Or is it roll away? A shyer trio you'll never find.

These appellations, slightly threatening in tone, have no relation to the actual size of the organ. Even the tiniest penis, to its owner, warrants big and dangerous names..."The Thrill Drill", or my personal favorite, "Vlad the Impaler". At least the latter shows a rudimentary knowledge of history.

I don't quite understand the threatening part. When those little things are pressed into action, don't they want to draw women in, attract them? Think about it for a second, would you prefer to be impaled, drilled, or massaged? Why not something like, "Gianni Gentle" or "Ronny Rubdown"? Or better yet, go for the gold with something meaningful, albeit lengthy, like, "No, Your Ass Doesn't Look Big".

My momma always taught me that you catch more flies with honey, than vinegar.

Owning a penis must be a daunting proposition, the maintenance alone must be overwhelming. The poor owner has to continually "drain the main vein", and "pull back its turtleneck" to properly wash. Then, of course, he has to dress the little bugger by "putting on its helmet".

It almost appears that the adult penis is the equivalent of a Barbie doll. They get to bathe it, dress it up, and play with it.

Not only is maintenance a problem, but judging from snippets of overhead male conversation, bad penile behavior certainly must run rampant. Truly, their conduct must be appalling. These poor, put upon, men are constantly involved in the distasteful, but necessary task of rebuking the wayward organ, by "spanking the monkey" or "choking the chicken".

And accountability? Nope, none at all. These tiny, dangerous organs take no responsibility for their actions. They're able to rise from their little nest, and somehow, with only one good eye, are able to hypnotize their owners, all the while, ferreting out their target. What they do, and how they do it is of no concern. They're not particularly picky about their targets either, often adopting an "any port in the storm" type of mentality. Sometimes they'll even go off, half cocked, leaving their poor owners dazed and senseless.

We, as women, really should give men a bit more respect. Spending a lifetime as a penis wrangler deserves some sort of credit.

In case you're wondering how I feel about my body parts – I have a vagina. I'm glad I have a vagina. It just sits there and patiently waits for its call to action.

And by the way, you're not going to catch me calling anything "Large Marge".

Copyright 2003. All rights reserved. For more really swell aspects of life, visit Mama's Secrets, <http://www.mamassecrets.com>

D. Gustafson is a mother, grandmother, daughter, ex–wife, artist, accountant, webmaster, and published writer. Oh, and of course, we can't leave out, "over achiever". Give her a couple of years, and with any luck, maybe we can toss in crane operator and, who knows, possibly dictator of a small tropical island.

Washroom Break

By Andre Leblanc

Picture yourself at a bar with some of your buddies. Everybody is having a good time. Suddenly your friend stands up and asks you to go to the washroom with them.

Now if you were a female this would be totally normal you would gladly accept and probably talk up a storm in the washroom. But if you were a man being asked by another man you would feel embarrassed, wonder about your friends' sexuality and manlyhood and hope that the rest of the group doesn't think the same about you.

Men and Their Little Friends

Why do woman use the washroom as a meeting place? Why do men always go to washroom alone? In the past when times where a bit simpler but more dangerous woman would never go to the washroom by themselves in fear of being attacked by a wild animal. Instead they would go out in packs so this way they could protect each other from possible threats. Therefore that is why they go to the washroom together as it is natural instinct.

On the other hand the man being the hunter and protector of the group would always go to the washroom by himself. Therefore asking another man to go to the washroom will make him look weak and unable to defend himself like one of the ladies. Although I'm sure a lot of woman can defend themselves better.

So what do woman talk about in the washroom. They pretty much talk about anything and anybody. They discuss which men they like and which men they don't, and any personal problems they are having or their friends. Therapy to anybody who looks's upset and cosmetics talk to any stranger who asks.

Men on the other hand don't talk to anybody. This is pretty much a universal unwritten rule. The further away they are from other men the better. Let's say there are a few urinal's the first man will choose the one at the end. Now the second man will choose the other one at the end. Never would you see a man pick one right beside another man when there are other ones further away.

Also most likely a man will take an enclosed toilet before he has to pee beside another man. One thing that men don't have a problem doing is farting, usually the louder and longer the better. For the ladies no farting is aloud. This once again brings us back to instincts for the men; the louder and stronger the better.

Read more articles on relationship, sex and more at

There are other singles waiting to talk to you at

You may use this article on your webpage only if you keep in 100% intact with are link or link directly to it

Andre Leblanc has several years experience in the online dating and relationship field. Including implemetation of new technology and creation of websites. Currently working on .

Washroom Break

Why Do Men Cheat?

The Hottest Beauty Trend Isn't for Women: It's Skin Care for Men

The Battle Of The Sexes Is On This Father's Day

Finding a great Cologne for Men so they smell great!

How Nice Guys, Shy Guys and Good Guys Finish First!

Hints for lovers

HIV/Aids Healed by the Power of God
Control your Headache!
People Finder Software

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!