Movie Review – Cellular

Movie Review – Cellular by Reggie Bannister

Cellular – 2005 New Line Productions Inc.

I had a chance to watch Cellular the other day and my first thought was that here we go with another spin-off of Phone Booth, another movie with someone forced to stay on the phone for 90 some minutes while we cringe in our seat. But, to my surprise, this was actually a very enjoyable movie. I'm am not really sure what genre to classify this movie in because it has it all. Suspense, drama, action, comic relief; this movie has everything.

The movie begins with the kidnapping of Jessica Martin, played by Kim Basinger.

Jessica is a high school science teacher, (that happens to wear fishnet stockings!!) who has her home broken into and mysteriously taken away to an unknown location by the "bad guys" and placed in an attic. They smash the phone hanging on the wall and proceed to lock Jessica in the attic. Jessica then "rigs" the broken phone (remember – she's a science teacher) and is able to randomly dial a phone number.

Now enters Ryan, played by Chris Evans, he plays your typical early 20's dude who's only mission is to win back his ex-girlfriend. Jessica finds a live number and lo and behold, it is Ryan's cell phone.

The movie then proceeds from there. Jessica cries out for someone she doesn't know in a desperate plea for help. Ryan initially has the normal reaction that anyone would have when receiving a call like this, but goes beyond the call of duty in an effort to save a woman that he doesn't even know.

I am not going to be the spoiler and this is all I am going to tell you, but this is a great sleeper movie. Is it a little far fetched? Yes, but so what. Forget about your problems and sit down and watch Cellular, I guarantee you wont be disappointed!

The Cellular Phone Explosion

By Levetta Rivera

The Cellular Phone Explosion by Levetta Rivera

Cellular phones are big business in the United States and abroad. More than 30,000 people sign up for and start using a cellular phone every day. It's nothing short of amazing how this industry has exploded in such a short period of time. Consumers can't seem to live without their cell phones and the cool accessory gadgets that go with them. As a result wireless communications companies and retailers are raking in the dough as consumers gobble up these sophisticated devices.

Cellular phones are nothing more than sophisticated radios. A cell phone is what you call a duplex device which uses one frequency for talking and another frequency for listening. Advanced technology has made it so that with a cellular phone you can talk to nearly anyone on the face of the earth from just about anywhere. This was unheard of not so long ago.

I'm sure the next wave of highly advanced cellular phone models have already made their way through the board room and are being packaged and ready to ship as I write this article.
