Movies On The Internet – Good For Us, Bad For Them?

By Sintilia Miecevole

You're watching TV one evening scanning through the reruns thinking it's pathetic how little there is to watch anymore when a fantastic movie trailer comes on. It's everything you love – the right actors, the wit, the action – and your heart beats a little faster in anticipation – if only you could watch it RIGHT NOW!

Well, the film industry has heard you. Along with the speed of the internet, consumers have now come to a new stage of demand. It used to be that we WANTED everything immediately – now we EXPECT it.

This is not the sort of thing that goes unnoticed by industries that cater to public reception. And now it has been announced that we may not be far away from simply walking over to our computer and downloading the newest releases.

During a meeting at the Cannes Film Festival, Culture Ministers from across Europe, film industry representatives and Internet Service Providers were among those who met to discuss the possible policies needed to distribute movies online.

BBC news reports European Union media commissioner Viviane Reding as stating: "In Europe, as in other continents, the opportunities for people to enjoy films online are set to increase tremendously over the next few years".

Naturally there are still many issues to be resolved before movies are readily available to the public online. Piracy and broadband capabilities are still being questioned.

Piracy became the prominent issue when music files were being illegally shared over the internet. While the music industry fought against such services as Napster, they are still far from recovering their market revenue and the film industry is not anxious to join them.

What can't be debated is that there IS a market, and no industry likes to bypass that because of possible problems.

Right now European broadband may not be up to the task of downloading such large files but has plans to proceed with distribution soon.

In America there has already been movie distribution with the inevitable legal proceedings against individuals facilitating unauthorized downloads.

Although the fight against piracy is being taken very seriously by the industry, it is still parents who are at the forefront of setting the example and instructing children on the ethics of downloading such material. Responsibility is learned.

In any event, the next time you see a great movie advertised and you are handy to the internet, perhaps you should stay in, avoid the lines and the traffic and check it out online!

Free Movies Online Have Exploded With The Advent Of Broadband

By K Snow

>From family flicks to comedy to Sci-Fi to thrillers - name it and you will find it on the net. With hundreds of movie titles that are now public domain and out of the gambit of the US copyright law, to watch free movies online has become as easy as logging onto the Internet. Watching free movies online has become a craze among people who have a few hours to spare and want to relax. There are sites that not only allow you to watch free movies online but also provide you with viewer ratings and sneak previews of new launches to help you in deciding the online movie that you would like to view.

To be able to watch free movies online, a modem connection will not suffice and you will need to have a company network or a broadband connection that will allow fast streaming of video and enable uninterrupted viewing. The next thing is to ensure that you have the software that can be used for playing a movie online. This includes Windows Media Player, Quicktime or RealPlayer and these are available as free downloads from most of the online movie sites. Having checked the availability of the software you need to choose one from among the sporadically increasing sites that permit anyone to watch free movies online. Check with friends who watch free movies online for a reference to the sites they use and be sure to take an opinion from sources you rely upon. You surely do not want to land up downloading a XXX rated movie while in company.

Once on the site, you can choose from the list provided based on genre or viewer ratings or a combination of both. Some sites will ask you to enter you Internet connection speed to be able to adjust the download accordingly. Also to ensure better quality of video, it is advised that all other programs running on the computer be closed. To watch free movie online with a relatively slower connection you may consider viewing in a smaller window. Full screen will provide adequate image quality only if the connection is fast enough.

Some of the advantages of the sites that enable us to watch free movies online are that one does not have to wait for the complete download to take place before one can start to watch a free movie online. The download and the viewing can take place simultaneously. A word of advice: if you are just beginning to watch free movies online and do not have some favorite sites, you may need to search and check out a few so that you can hone onto the site that stocks your kind of free online movies.

So get a bowl of popcorn, settle in the beanbag, dim the lights and enjoy!
