I don't usually get too excited about what I read in the news. After all, what can I do about it? But one item I recently saw made me jump up out of my chair.

I rushed over to my clever lawyer's office.

"Look at this!" I proclaimed as I burst into his office.

Clever Lawyer said nothing. His client echoed his words with her ruby red lips.

I placed the newspaper on his desk.

"Happy Guy, what are you doing here?" he wanted to know. "We don't have a meeting."

"Just look at this headline." I demanded, ignoring his irritating obsession with minute details. "We should take action immediately."

Slowly, Clever Lawyer picked up the newspaper and read the headline. His eyes returned to me. "This says that Monsanto is suing Oakhurst Dairy for labels on their milk reading 'no artificial growth hormones'. What does that have to do with you?"

"Don't you see?" I asked incredulously. "Monsanto makes rBST, an artificial hormone for milk cows. It looks like they think the label on Oakhurst Dairy milk hurts their business because it implies that milk from their hormone-treated cows is inferior."

"I don't see what it has to do with you," Clever Lawyer said.

"Yes, I don't see what it has to do with you," Ruby Red chimed in.

"It has everything to do with me," I replied. "Look here. See this book about happiness? Top Publisher printed 'New York Times Bestseller' right on the cover. Can you believe it?"

"Oh yeah, I've heard of this book," Clever Lawyer smiled. "It's supposed to be quite good. In fact, I recall seeing it on the New York Times bestseller list."

"Exactly," I exclaimed. "Let's sue Top Publisher for everything he's got."

"Why?" Clever Lawyer wanted to know, much to my surprise.

"Yes, why?" Ruby Red also wanted to know.

"Because he is claiming his book is a New York Times bestseller," I explained in exasperation.

"But it is," Ruby Red pointed out.

"That's not the point," I complained. "Their claim implies that my Get Happy Workbook is somehow inferior because it is not on the New York Times bestseller list ... yet."

"Um ... your Get Happy Workbook?" Clever Lawyer asked.

"That's right."

"Isn't that an e-book?"

"Yes it is."

"I don't think the New York Times lists e-books," Ruby Red noted.

"It doesn't matter," I insisted. "Top Publisher should be forced to remove such an offensive claim and to pay me damages for thousands of copies of lost sales."

"But you can't do that," Clever Lawyer exclaimed.

"That's right. You can't do that," Ruby Red repeated.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because their claim is just a statement of fact."

"So is Oakhurst Dairy's," I pointed out. "But that doesn't stop Monsanto from suing them."

"But you're not Monsanto," Clever Lawyer explained. "Monsanto is a biotech giant, and biotech companies are always being accused of making 'Frankenstein fruit' or 'veggie eunuchs' or other such delicacies."

"That's right," Ruby Red joined in. "Even Viagra couldn't make a man out of one of those cucumbers."

We both stared at Ruby Red in surprise. The color of her face instantly matched the color of her lips.

"Look, Monsanto still has to prove its case," Clever lawyer warned. "We have no idea if they will. You would have to prove your case, too. I have a pretty good idea that you can't, since the New York Times does not list e-books."

"So, you are saying I should not sue Top Publisher for claiming his book is a New York Times Bestseller," I concluded. "Instead I should sue the New York Times for not naming my e-book a bestseller?"

The Heart

By Mohammad Ali Abid

The Heart by Mohammad Ali Abid

Question: Is the heart the centre of prudence and insights in human being? If it was so, what happens when hearts are transplanted or in cases of Artificial hearts, and is the heart which is mentioned in Quran and Sunna is this known physical heart? Answer: Today morning only I got the answer which I have been searching for since a long time we having tracing all materials and news which may quench our search and give us the answer. We have sent one of our brothers to the center of Artificial hearts operations in America. He requested them to speak to the patients. They told him that it is not allowed. They asked him why does he want to speak to them. He said that he wants to meet the patients and ask them some questions. Then what happened is that those who are in charge as of the center became annoyed. They did not understand why does he want to speak to the patients? They informed him that whatever information he wants it will be given to him by them. However he told them that Allah would reveal a matter which would be a miracle. It will be a scientific and miraculous break through that would be the subject of discussion in the next years. He told them that, if Allah wills, they will see and remember. They continued to trace and follow up all the news and day a teacher in the University of King Abdel Aziz asked me if I had heard the news asked him what was the news. He said that it was discovered that the heart is not just a pump of blood, but it is also the center of intellect and prudence. He said Allah is great. He asked the teacher to show him the source of the news. He gave him the news papering which the news were published and it is still with me. Days passed and center of heart operation and artificial hearts was opened in Jordan. We considered it as a suitable chance to get some more information. Then one of the brothers who is tracing and following up the issue said, "Have you heard about the first press conference held by a person who has undergone an artificial heart operation?" I said, No, He said that the person with artificial heart stated that he was suffering from an artificial heart which acts as a mere blood pump. He is suffering from changes in his behaviour and conducts. Later on I got a call from a Sawdi brother who works as a doctor in the field of artificial hearts. He was planning to write a research. I advised him to concentrate on the mental, psychological changes, which affects the person who has undergone an operation of artificial heart. However, he informed me that it is well know today in the medical circles that the new artificial heart is empty from any emotional reactions. It has no reaction to dander whereas the natural heart reacts. It has co reaction to any thing which a person my love whereas the natural heart responds. It is a passive and reactions heart which does not act and react with the rest of the body. I said to him that this state of affairs of the artificial heart would reveal many things and would explain many issues which we are tracing now. Only we have to wait. Already it was discovered now that heart contains prudent hormones. These hormones send messages to the other parts of the body this makes it evident that the heart is the center of prudence and insight and not mere a pump of blood.
