Planning Your Cruise Ship Vacation

Do It Right the First Time

A vacation aboard a cruise ship is exhilarating. After all, what can be more relaxing, entertaining and rejuvenating than spending days upon days on the calm and peaceful sea - completely away from it all? Cruises are a great all-in-one vacation combining shopping, shows, dining, lodging and transportation in one package. But there are a few things to consider before you start singing 'anchors away'.

Solo, Couple or Family? Cruise packages and destinations give you a range of choices. These include family fun trips, romantic honeymoon cruises, and theme lines for single, senior, disabled, gay or lesbian passengers. Choosing the right package will ensure you have the most pleasant and satisfying vacation possible.

Where, When and How Long? Because your destination is just as important as the ride itself, research the many luxurious ports available. Next, decide how long you'd like to set sail. Can you afford a week away or just a quick weekend getaway? What are the ideal dates for your excursion? This will depend both on your availability and the peak season for your destination. If you can't afford to change plans due to acts of nature, be sure to book around typical foul weather seasons.

Scuba Diving or Cultural Exploration? Are you a dive in and get wet type, or do you prefer more leisurely and educational activities like touring cities or visiting museums? [

Formal or Casual? Cruise liners offer a great opportunity to deck out in your favorite evening dress or unwind in a pair of flip-flops. Select a cruise line and destination that lets you express your inner fashion diva, and remember to ask about deck attire before you pack.
