

This Free E-Book is brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!

Planting Trees For Harvesting - Is It For You?

By Gabriel Adams

If you have a lot of extra land and don't know what to do with it, then let me suggest growing trees.

With growing trees you can earn a small income without having to do much work. Sometimes if you're lucky the government will even help you pay or provide the trees as long as you keep them planted a certain amount of time.

Now let us look at the types of trees to plant. The most commonly used trees are pines. They are fast growing, fairly hardy, and have good wood. They also have a fairly good chance of surviving a controlled field burning.

To start off you should make sure your land can handle the trees. Check the soil for nutrients and see if there is any chance of flooding. Natural disasters ruin tons of crops every year and it's no different for tree harvesters. Another good thing to have is flat or only mildly hilly land. This will greatly help when it comes time to harvest the trees.

When you start to plant your trees plant them in long straight rows. You should plant them fairly close together without causing them to lose sunlight. As they grow you will need to start thinning out the trees so that some of them can grow bigger and taller.

Some people will also burn out the underbrush in a controlled fire. This helps clear below the canopy of trees and will help strengthen them.

You can figure on at least 15 years per harvest with periods in between where you thin trees and sell them off as wood or pulp. This is a long wait but it doesn't require much work and allows you to get that unused land earning income. You can also buy land with trees already on it and harvest them. This will help with the mortgage of the land and will get the land clear.

Check out our website for tree seeds + germination instructions.

<http://www.mishobonsai.com/>

Why You Should Plant Trees In Your Yard

By Gabriel Adams

A lot of new subdivisions are taking out trees to make space for more houses. A lot of people just leave their yard treeless because they think it's too much of a hassle to plant more trees. There are many reasons why you should take the time to plant trees in your yard. Listed below are a few of the reasons that will directly benefit you.

1. Shade. Having a lot of trees in your yard will provide shade which can keep you cool on a hot summer day. The trees will also help your air conditioning bill down by shading your house from direct sunlight.
2. Landscaping. Trees give a yard a natural and inviting look. They also prove a lot easier to take care of than your average flower or bush.
3. Cost. Keeping your yard looking good can cost a lot of money. By planting trees in your yard you will not have to plant anymore plants as the seasons change and they die off. A well planted and taken care of tree can last for as long as you will have your house.

Another great reason to plant trees is because it helps the environment. There are three main subsections for this.

– As more people are born and the world expands there is more urbanization going on. This means more and more forests are being destroyed to make room for cities and to provide building materials for houses. By planting trees in your yard you help replace those trees which were lost.

– Trees also help clean the environment of carbon dioxide which in turn keeps the air healthy to breathe. This also helps prevent global warming by taking harmful chemicals out of the air that will destroy our ozone.

– Birds will also find trees that you plant a nice and cozy home. Because of all the deforestation more and more birds are looking around for homes and by providing them one you help them thrive. As an added benefit it can be nice to sit out on the porch and listen to the birds sing in the evening.

Visit our site for tree seeds, bonsai seeds, and germination instructions.

<http://www.mishobonsai.com/>

This Free E-Book has been brought to you by Natural-Aging.com.

100% Effective Natural Hormone Treatment
Menopause, Andropause And Other Hormone Imbalances
Impair Healthy Healing In People Over The Age Of 30!