Selecting A Party Theme

By George Meszaros

Coming up with a theme is the easiest way to create an atmosphere for your party. Selecting your party theme should be one of the first steps in your planning process. A theme doesn't eliminate spontaneity from your event it makes it more complete. Before you create your party theme think about how some themed parties made you feel in the past. Was it the Hawaiian party theme, or the 60s flower child theme, or Mardi gras party theme was the most precious experience? Your theme could be a single theme or variations on other themes.

Whatever your party theme may be make sure you incorporate it in as many aspects of your party as you can. For example, if you go with a Christmas party theme make sure everything speaks "Christmas." You should ask your guests to come dressed in Christmas theme close. Make sure you prepare foods normally served around Christmas time, and serve it in Christmas theme plates. The possibilities for decorating your house for a Christmas theme are endless. Even the colors you use should reflect your theme.

If you are having a party for your child, get her involved. Your child will have a lot of fun just choosing the party theme.

Because most holidays reoccur every year, you have plenty of time for planning and preparing. You can stock up on supplies long before your event. If you have a Christmas party every year, you may be able to save a lot of money buying decoration items after the holiday season. By planning ahead you are not only better prepared but you can also save a lot of money. Gift and party stores are full of great deals to be had after the holidays. It gives you an opportunity to pick up holiday themes plates, napkins, tablecloths, cups, and many more items you may need for your party.

The fundamental difference between theme parties and parties that feature themes is the amount of planning involved. With some thought, a lot of creativity, and careful planning you can create a great theme party everyone will love.

How To Create The Right Ambiance For The Perfect Party

By Mohamed Rabea

A party will always be a perfect occasion to relax and have fun, meet people, and get high naturally. Thus, party planners must make sure that the parties they coordinate are well-planned and well thought out.

To be successful, a party must have all the elements that are considered by most people as necessary when throwing a party. To start with, the party planner is faced with the difficult task of choosing a theme for the party, so as to get the right ambiance.

Getting the right atmosphere or setting for a party requires planning and research. You have to be updated with just about anything, so you can come up with an appropriate party theme. In selecting a theme, you have to consider the personality of your client, the purpose of the party and the invited guests.

If you are planning a children's party, then choose from among the various cartoon character or fantasy themes, depending on the character or taste of the child for whom the party is being prepared.

A launching party that is intended to announce or launch a company product should consider the product to be launched. It can be a formal or an informal party, depending on the preference of your client. From here, you can choose a party theme which should have a relation to the product that will be launched.

The choice of theme will make or unmake your party. The theme sets the ambiance of the party and if you really want to make an impact, then every aspect of the party should be related to the theme.

If you have decided to have a Greek party theme, then everything should evolve around this. The invitation could have a background of an awe-inspiring Greek pillar embossed in gold ink, which shows off the Greek architecture. You can also require the guests to come in Greek-inspired attires and the food servers dressed in Greek robes and sandals. Even the menu, the decoration and the music should be Greek-inspired in order to get the right atmosphere.

To get the right ambiance for a party, the party planner should also coordinate the over-all preparation for the party including the selection of the location for the party, the activities and the program. You may have the right ambiance but it will not be fun unless the party is interactive, meaning the guests are given the opportunity to relax and meet other people.

If you get the theme right and you plan everything around this theme, then you just make sure you have the right food and the right guest list and you will surely have a great party ambiance.
