Selecting Proper Golf Equipment

By David Corey

This article covers every angle you will need to know when purchasing your first set of golf clubs.

Do not fall into the typical trap of just buying the first set of clubs you see on the golf shop wall. Most new golfers run out to the golf shop and purchase the latest and great clubs without doing any research at all. Believe me I know, I was one of those golfers. You truly should get your swing evaluated by a golfing professional prior to purchasing your first set of golf clubs.

Possibly the most significant pieces of golf gear are your clubs. The official rules declare that a player can have no more than fourteen of them in his or her golf bag, one of which has to be your putter. That leaves you with only 13 choice weapons to go to the battlefield with, so you better make sure they all work properly.

When it comes to arming yourself with the proper golf clubs, you ought to be honest with yourself about your current playing level, the quality of your golf swing, and exactly what kind of golfer you are. Some great sports related material located at irons and woods that match your precise game. You'll also end up saving yourself cash in the long run. For instance, you can save hundreds if you are a beginner golfer, realize this, and buy a cheap starter set of low quality golf clubs.

Here we will cover the different aspects of your game and what you need to consider when selecting a golf club. There are several factors that you need to consider. They are listed below. There is not one sole factor that will determine the outcome of your golf game. All factors come into play when trying to keep the golf ball in the short grass. Just remember the importance of doing your research and selecting the proper golf equipment for your makeup and frame build.

Selecting Proper Golf Equipment

To match your golf gear with your playing skills, determine first which category of player you are. There is the low–handicapper, mid–handicapper, and high–handicap golfer. So you know, a handicap measures how well you typically shoot compared to the average par of an 18–hole golf course. Professionals classify a low–handicap golfer as somebody who shoots, on average, less than an 82 on an average course.

That equals 9 or few strokes over par, or a handicap in the low single digits. A low–handicaps player has a single–digit handicap, meaning he or she will generally score less than 10 strokes over par, or an 82 or less on a par–72 golf course. If you're in this league, you'll want to pack your bag with high–performance clubs that can maximize your playing abilities.

Such golf equipment includes a driver (very important piece of gear and expensive) and at least one other wood, such as the four wood. Bring your low irons, too, such as the 3 or 4 iron. Players with your great skill can accurately hit these normally difficult–to–it clubs, and these clubs can make reaching the green from 200 plus yards out a cinch. You can best manage mid–range approach shots with the high trajectory irons, your 8, 9, and pitching wedge. Of course, you'll want your sand wedge, as well, in the unlikely event you sail one onto the beach.

I hope you received enough information to make the proper selection when purchasing your set of golf clubs. Remember your swing is connected to your club. You wouldn't play basketball in sandals right?

So do your homework and buy the clubs suited for your game.

Golf Bags For Beginner Golfers

By Raymond McNally

You might be a golf beginner looking for your first set of golf clubs and equipment or a pro shopping for upgrades, but all will agree that golf bags are essential in the game. Next to golf clubs, a golf bag is one of the most important golfing equipment there is.

It is considered a necessity. A good golf bag will lessen your worries on the golf course, (i.e. all your clubs are in their proper place) and you can focus on your teeing.

If you're a beginner golfer, then golf bags are definitely a must. However, there are things that you should know before going to the nearest golf store and buying a golf bag on impulse. First, there are two types of golf bags? carry bags and cart bags.

Selecting Proper Golf Equipment

Carry bags are golf bags that are used when you are planning to have a lot of walking on the golf course. Cart golf bags are those that you use when walking is not possible (as some golf courses prohibit walking), and riding a golf cart is your option. A beginner golfer will most definitely buy a walking bag at first, although if you are a serious beginner of the game, then you will eventually buy both types of golf bags.

If you are a newbie in the game, you might ask "What is a golf bag for? I only have four golf clubs." A golf bag is a functional equipment rather than a fashion statement. It is not just for your golf clubs, but it can also hold your other golf equipment and accessories. Some advanced golf bags even have pocket coolers that can keep your drink ice-cold even for hours! You might want to consider that, especially when you will buy a carry golf bag.

When buying a golf bag, especially a carry golf bag, find a comfortable one. One should check the straps to see if it fits comfortably and whether it can be carried easily. Remember that your golf bag will be one of your trusted companions on the greens, and that you will spend hours with it. So choose wisely. Don't buy low quality bags, because you will end up purchasing another bag in the next few months if your old golf bag tears up. You should also buy your golf bag depending on the number of golf clubs that you have. Most golf bags can carry up to 15 golf clubs. A tournament however limits the number of golf clubs in your golf bag.

Another important thing to consider when purchasing a golf bag is its weight. This is one of the most important things to know. Golf bags should be light enough to be carried or carted easily, but sturdy enough to hold your clubs and protect them. Some golf bags are even water resistant, and are rain proofed for the protection of your clubs. Most of these golf bags have 8 or 9 dividers or pockets. Again, the number of dividers that you will need depend on the amount of clubs and accessories you will carry. If you have many golf clubs then choose a golf bag with many dividers. However, these types of golf bags have the tendency to be heavier. Some bags can weigh less than 5 pounds! These types of bags are made up of space-age materials such as graphite, however, they are more expensive.

Remember that when buying golf bags, the lighter it is, the better and more comfortable it will be.
