You've spent a lot of time preparing your PowerPoint presentations and now you're ready to show the world all your company has to offer. You set up some appointments for sales presentations with a few members of the local Chamber of Commerce. On the appointed day, you lug your laptop and your presentation to your prospective client's office and start your show. They're impressed with what they see and you get the job. And that's the way things are supposed to work.

But what happens when you're ready to start finding clients outside a 30-mile radius? For one thing, your costs for getting new work will soar. Not only will your travel expenses increase, but the time spent traveling will keep you from working on other tasks that need to get done.

It's hard when you're trying to grow your business solo and you're the one wearing all the hats. You can multi-task to a certain extent, but still, when you work alone, there's just so much you can accomplish in one day. Sure you can hire help, but that means adding payroll and other employee management tasks to your already overburdened schedule.

What if there was a way you could show your PowerPoint presentations to anyone in the world, at any time of the day, without going broke? Do you think you could nail new business? Is this the thing that you've been wishing for night after night, while you lay there wide awake trying desperately to fall asleep?

Well for one low annual fee, which works out to be about $50 per month, you can show your PowerPoint presentations as many times as you want, to anyone, anywhere in the world. No, you're not dreaming! The technology exists right now.

When you want someone to view your PowerPoint presentation, you send that person an invitation by email. The invitation provides a link and an access code. Your guest simply clicks on the link, enters the code, then sits back and enjoys the show!

Because your guests view the presentation from a standard web browser, they won't need any special software to see your presentation. And even though you're not physically present, you can still control the show.

There are no limits to the number of presentations that you can store in your private account. You can jump around from slide to slide and select the slides you want your audience to see. You can also switch between different presentations while your viewers are still logged in. And best of all, you can read right from your notes without anyone else noticing.

Up to ten viewers can logon and view your presentation simultaneously. You can show your presentations to an unlimited number of viewers, but there is an additional cost for this. Anyone who has a PDA can view your presentation, too, as long as Flash is built into the PDA.

So if you're ready to show the world your new product demonstration, or you need to conduct a meeting with different people who are located in different offices, or you are in the training business and you're setting up virtual classrooms, or even if you need to train others on the use of a particular product, you need OnlinePRESENTER.

OnlinePRESENTER requires Windows 98, 2000, XP or NT and PowerPoint 2000, XP, or 2003.

This cutting-edge way to show off your PowerPoint presentations is well worth the price of admission. Without leaving the comfort of your home office, you can be showing your wares to prospects living in New York or New Delhi! So sit back and let the show begin.

How To Use The Internet For God by Mae Mueller

Do you have a Christian product, service or message that you would like to inexpensively advertise and distribute around your town or all over the world?

Would you like to invite more people in your city to your church?

Would you like to find out how to inexpensively write a Christian book and distribute it around the world?

Would you like to reach around the world and help people come to know Christ better?

Would you like to learn inexpensive ways to powerfully support missionaries or help feed hungry children?

Using the Internet for God is the e-book that will tell you how to tap into the power of the Internet and use it for God's glory.

Most people do not have the funding to do a nationwide television, radio, newspaper or magazine ad campaign.

The Internet is a tool that most people can afford to use to get to word out about their Christian products, services and causes.

The problem is, most people don't have a clue about how to use Internet effectively as an advertising or distribution tool.

Fortunately, a Christian owner of an Internet marketing company has put together this easy to use guide about how to use the Internet simply and powerfully to get the word out about important Christian products, services, causes and messages.

Some of the amazing things you will learn include:

* How to put together an inexpensive website where people can learn about or order your Christian product, service, cause or message.

* Learn how to write compelling written sales copy that actually gets people to take action after they read the content on your site.

* Learn how to get lots of targeted traffic to your web site (it doesn't make a lot of sense to have a web site if the right people are not going to visit it).
