Have you ever been wildly successful in something you've done? If you haven't, I'm sure you know someone who has.

Quite often in the world of home based businesses, we're supposed to believe that we can duplicate the successes of others. In fact, that's what a large portion of the marketing we see these days is done on.

It appeals to our baser instincts. Regardless of what it appeals to, however, there still lies the problem that we must take whatever software, advice, or program that we've been sold and use it for our success.

Quite often, however, there is one fatal flaw with what we've received — the person who sold it to you happened upon his success and couldn't duplicate it if you gave him a million dollars!

Now, that's not to say that all programs or systems you might buy into are flawed and won't work. To the contrary, I believe that some of them will work but if you don't spend a little bit of time investigating how will you know for sure?

Quite a few people will throw good money after bad buying program after program hoping that the next one will make them successful. I know I've been guilty of this in the past. Eventually they'll give up in frustration and claim, "This Internet stuff doesn't really work!" Replace "Internet" with whatever the new scheme of the day is and you've got what they're saying to all their friends.

So how do you avoid this problem? It's actually quite simple.

The first thing you need to do is come up with a system. Now, a system is nothing more than a set of processes that you'll follow every time you do a particular process.

For instance, if you clean your kitchen in this order every time you've got a system:

Put dishes in dishwasher
Wipe counters
Clean floor

But does that system actually work? That's where tracking comes into play. If you know exactly what you should be doing and you're actually doing it then you can track the results of what you've done.

The next part is where the beauty of a system comes into play. You are not locked into doing that particular system forever. In fact, I'd recommend you change it from time to time. But what you need to do is test this system alongside your new system and see which one performs better.

You're basically playing the two systems against each other to see which performs better. And, as long as you adjust, your processes will get better and better as time goes along.

That's what successful marketers do. In fact, you can see this in place with folks who run campaigns with Google's AdWords program. They'll run an ad side by side just to see which one performs better.

They put a system in place, test the results and above all – track everything they do. If you do the same with your systems, you'll probably find areas to increase your income that you never even thought of before!

Magic Ritual Spells, Do They Work?

By Preston Houer

The kind of magic that is performed in a ritual is done so with the use of spells. Though no one actually knows if it works.

Magicians who perform magic in this form usually make use of a memorized script with the appropriate spell, activity and motions that should be done. Those who practice the occult have claimed that performing this type of magic is a lot more similar to car driving. If the directions are followed appropriately, you could actually get to your destination and so the magic could work. But still, there is no one hundred percent guarantee.

Current witches who practice Wicca magic have in their possession a book of spells. This book has specific and sometimes complex directions for performing basic ritualistic magic. A basic magic ceremony usually means that no animal, insect, bug or worm will be harmed in the process. A regular Wicca magic spell only requires plain candles, herbs or stones as any one of the ingredients. The spells used come from a variety of influences and cultures who also used to perform ritualistic magic, from the Romans to the Egyptians and the Greeks.

All kinds of religions all over the world have their forms of magic and magic spells. Christianity, Islam, Hinduism – to name a few - all make use of a form of incantation, invocation, and petition.

Special magic tools are also used by ritualistic magicians. They sometimes employ a common dagger, or a chalice and - the one thing magicians cannot go without - a magic wand. Each of these objects serves as a symbol which represents a specific force.

The use of a shape that is sacred is also utilized by ritualistic magicians. This is done to protect them from any entity that attempts to disrupt the ritual as well as to invoke an entity to turn up within the sacred circle. These shapes are usually in the form of a pentagram. Any spirit could be commanded within the confines of the circle by the appropriate invocation of their name. These names as well as a host of other phrases and spells help achieve an ultimate will power that causes a magician to focus on the task at hand, be it to bring boils to a specific body part of a sworn enemy or to call on the assistance of a dark angel to perform a preferred or unspeakable task.

However, it has to be reiterated that unless you do such a ritual yourself, no one could ever one hundred percent guarantee that doing such actually works.
