Supporting A Cause And Fundraising With The Latest Tool

By Chris Angeles

We can usually see people wearing rubber silicone wristbands on their wrists. Why do they keep wearing these rubber silicone wristbands, and what does this signify?

Nowadays, we see people wear rubber silicone wristbands in different colors to support their cause. Some people also buy these rubber silicone wristbands because they believe in something that is why they also want other people to believe in it. That is why most organizations use these rubber silicone wristbands to get their message across.

These rubber silicone wristbands emerged just recently to help organizations to raise funds by selling these rubber silicone wristbands. By using these rubber silicone wristbands, they can make sure that they can spread the message they want to send to the public. These rubber silicone wristbands are cheap and have a fast inventory turnover. Some organizations buy these rubber silicone wristbands for less than a dollar and sell them for a dollar and fifty to two dollars.

I have a friend who wanted to help this little girl in her community. The girl is suffering from this rare disease. The girl's family did not have enough money for the little girl's treatment that is why my friend wanted to help them. She thought that these rubber silicone wristbands were a good idea. She had them produced and sold them then sent the proceeds to the family of the little girl.

Buy selling these customized rubber silicone wristbands, my friend did not just help the family by giving them the proceeds but she also made the public realize that this little girl was suffering. Look at what help that was given to someone that was needing help?

I think these rubber silicone wristbands are a really good idea. And I know that these rubber silicone wristbands are here to stay.

Some Important Fundraising Tips To Remember

By D. David Dugan

Fundraising doesn't have to be a challenge if you have a good product, are well organized, and have a good attitude. Try to put yourself in your customers' shoes, treat them how you would like to be treated. And always remember you are representing your team so be on your best behavior. Keeping all this in mind, here are some great tips to help you have a successful fundraiser.

Organizational Tips

- Identify your organizational needs and fundraising goals · Motivate your organization and members · Relay the organizational goals to the parents and participants · Begin planning the logistics of distributing the products to the participants, and eventually, to the supporters

Helpful Hints

- Set a daily goal based on how much time is available · Practice your sales presentation with your participants · Show customers the Order Form so they can see the various team options · Be helpful if the customer is indecisive, and be prepared to offer a suggestion · Keep a copy of your customers' name and purchases for next year's fundraising drive

When selling be sure to follow these steps:

- Introduce yourself, (Hello, my name is____) · Tell the person why you are fundraising (We are trying to raise money for our football program...) · Ask if they would like to buy multiples of your items. · Tell them your item is a great, inexpensive gift for fans of any age · Be sure to thank the customer (Even if they do not buy any of your items – remember you are representing your team and town.)

Most people are more than willing to help you in your fundraising efforts. They have probably been in a few themselves. Always remember to thank them and wish them a pleasant day. A good product and good service will quickly bring you success in your fundraising efforts.
