fill up quickly, so you should get in the mindset that you need to make a decision fairly quickly if you spot the perfect trip.

There are a few things you'll want to take care of before you spring your romantic surprise on her so that she won't have to spend the few weeks leading up to her departure worrying. Once you have a few dates picked out, put them on hold if possible and start making some phone calls:

- Contact her boss and explain that you would like to arrange a few of her vacation days if possible. Explain that it is a surprise and ask him or her to keep the secret.
- Talk to her best friend to find out if any appointments are necessary. Will she want a pedicure a few days before leaving? Set one up.
- Let her parents in on the secret as well, but swear them to secrecy, too.
- Arrange for any pet care needed, including boarding of dogs or cats if necessary.
- If you have children, make the arrangements for them to stay with their grandparents or friends and swear them to secrecy. This will be the toughest sell - kids have trouble with big secrets, but try!
- Check her date book - if she has made any appointments or plans that will need to be rearranged, call and explain that you are planning a surprise trip, and that she may be calling later to cancel at the last minute. This will soften the news when she does call later to cancel her appointments.
- Get ready for some romantic days and nights on your last minute cruise that you won't soon forget!
